To Prevent Floods.
Let Her Marry.
Almost Arrested.
A Death Poem.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

(Copyright, 1927.)

SEVERE floods in New England destroying many lives and millions in property, sweeping away homes, forcing mills and factories to shut down, will concentrate attention more earnestly than ever on the flood control problem.

It is as much the duty of government to spend some of its superfluous hundreds of millions to protect people from floods, as it is to protect them in war, or especially to send billions to help foreigners at war.

WILLIAM HOHENZOLLERN'S sister, Princess Victoria Schaumberg-Lippe, aged sixty-three, wants to marry a young Russian only twenty-seven. Lutheran clergymen refuse to marry them, saying the difference in age makes it "unethical."

To refuse marriage to those entitled seems unethical. The spirit alone counts and many a woman of sixty-three is younger in spirit than thousands of others at twenty-three.

AND what about Sarah, whose husband, Abraham, was 100 years old when her son Isaac was born, and Sarah not so much younger? Do Lutherans lack faith in this Twentieth Century? Let them read the twenty-first chapter of Genesis.

ASSORTED news today, one item rather startling. The government actually talked about arresting a man worth a good many million dollars, because somebody representing him seemed anxious to bribe a juror.

IF it is all right to bribe a cabinet member, why make a fuss about bribing one juryman, especially when the case involves BIG stealing, the sort not usually punished?

Government realizes that dealing with "important" men, like walking on eggs, should be done cautiously. A warrant was issued for the "certain rich man," but the warrant was called back a half hour after it had been issued.

TWO women killed themselves yesterday. One, all dressed, swam out into a lake, increasing her pace to escape a man that tried to rescue her. She was drowned. Look for the man. Another put a pillow in the oven of her stove, turned on the gas and died, after writing a poem headed "farewell to R. S." One verse read:

"A few short weeks of happiness,
A few short weeks of gladness,
And now my heart just aches and aches
It's just so full of sadness."

Such poetry is no excuse for suicide. The poor girl, only twenty-seven years old, could have found another "R. S."

JOHN SEYBOLD, seventy-one, a farmer, wants back $7,500 paid a medium. Seybold talked to a spirit named "Sarah," liked Sarah's voice, paid for Sarah's wedding dress, at her request donated $500 for wayward girls. Then, after he had spent $7,500 to please Sarah, on her promise to come to earth and marry him, "Sarah," says the farmer, "never showed up."

Do not laugh. This old farmer simply paid in advance for happiness to come later. Believers in some of many religions on earth, the false ones, are now doing the same and will be disappointed as Farmer Seybold was disappointed. Their disappointment will come hereafter.

THERE is talk of building another Westminster Abbey to hold corpses of immortal heroes, scientists, statesmen. The old Abbey is crowded, and Americans are expected to contribute to the new building. We ought to concentrate on raising a few immortals here. Besides, if the British will wait two or three hundred years many immortals in the Abbey will no

DEATHS MAY GO TO 200

BOSTON, Nov. 5.—(AP.)—Raging rivers continued to spread death and destruction through the valleys of northern and western New England today, paralyzing communication and shrouding the extent of the disaster in uncertainty.

While more than 30 lives were known to have been lost, unconfirmed, indefinite reports from the isolated area indicated that the death toll might mount above 200.

The mystery's darkest center hovered over Montpelier, Vt., whence trickled vague reports of loss of life varying from 137 to 212 persons. The bursting of a reservoir was said to have sent more than 10 feet of water swirling through the city.

A wireless message from the stricken area to the Associated Press, picked up at Binghamton, N. Y., reported the loss of 10 lives and among them said to be Lieut. Gov. Jackson. A similar message, picked up at Hudson, Mass., however, mentioned persistent but unverified reports of high loss of life at Montpelier, but made no mention of any loss of life at Barre.

The meager reports pictured in dim outline thousands of men, women and children homeless and exposed to the rigors of steadily dropping temperatures, with food supply cut off and without means of appealing for help.

The damage to property, according to early estimates, mounted into staggering sums, while in addition thousands of persons were temporarily deprived of livelihood with the paralysis of industry.

While the Green Mountain region of Vermont and the Berkshire region of Massachusetts were the most seri-

VERMONT—Collapse of reservoir at Montpelier reported to have caused loss of life estimated at from 137 to 212 persons. Unconfirmed reports said that Lt. Gov. Jackson had perished with nine other at Barre. Windsor placed in charge of troops with a thousand persons homeless and dead lines established to prevent looting. Burlington isolated by rising waters. Rutland restored to communication after being isolated 24 hours.

MASSACHUSETTS — Western area suffered severely. Village of Becket almost swept away when mountain reservoir burst. Montreal-Boston train service suspended. Boston threatened with milk famine.

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Northern towns cut off. North Walpole reported under 17 feet of water.

CONNECTICUT—Rivers at record heights and property damage placed at $1,000,000.

RHODE ISLAND—Many mill dams burst and 5,000 persons out of work.

MAINE—One hundred washouts and landslides reported in White Mountains.

NEW YORK STATE—Hudson Valley menaced. River at Albany 10 feet above normal.

QUEBEC—Property damage of several millions of dollars reported from Eastern townships, where crops were destroyed and timber swept away. Rail service paralyzed. Governor-General and Lady Willingdon had narrow escape when bridge at Kinsey was washed away 90 minutes after their Quebec-Montreal train had passed over.

BALLOON PILOT DEAD

By International News Service.

SCOTT FIELD, BELLEVILLE, Ill., Nov. 5. — The attempt of Capt. Hawthorne C. Gray, argonaut of the ethereal spaces almost nine miles above the earth, to attain a new altitude record has ended in his death, it was learned today, when officers here received word that his body had been found in his balloon basket near Sparta, Tenn., by a farmer.

What happened to him since Capt. Gray left here yesterday afternoon to soar into the sky probably will never be entirely known, but the fact that his body was found in his balloon basket indicates that he ascended to a great height and was overcome by the rarefied atmosphere.

The Undermining of Patriotism Is Not a Cause For Laughter

TO THE EDITOR:

The New York Sun says, in its headlines, MAYOR THOMPSON'S 'AMERICA FIRST' PLEA GETS A NATIONWIDE LAUGH. SOME MAYORS PLEDGE AID, BUT MOST OF THE ANSWERS TO HIS $10 APPEAL ARE SARCASTIC REFUSALS."

The Poet Goldsmith refers to "The Loud Laugh that spoke the vacant mind."

It is much easier to laugh than it is to THINK. Any fool can laugh, and, in fact, most fools do not do anything else. The Bible says:

"For as the crackling of thorns under a pot, so is the laughter of the fool."

Mayor Thompson's plea that American school books be written by Americans for Americans is not a thing to be laughed at, and it is not laughed at by true Americans with common sense.

It is not a laughing matter to have British propagandists, or foreign propagandists of any kind, invade our schools and mould the impressionable minds of our young Americans into belief that George Washington was merely a rebel, Paul Jones a pirate, Patrick Henry a dissolute drunkard, and all our national heroes unworthy of the regard in which they have been always held by patriotic Americans.

Our heroes are genuine heroes.

It took courage and character and consecration to high ideals to revolt against oppression and to declare and achieve the independence of this country.

Franklin aptly expressed the situation when he

They are quite used to these Pittsburgh invasions, and in the many years they've been trapsing here with their red and black sweatered football teams, they've learned to take their lickings and their victories, and they've gone home both joyful and sad.

But in all the years they've come here to play Pitt, and they have come here since 1890, they have never come with higher hopes, or with more at stake, than they come with today. They are bringing their great Kerr coached eleven, undefeated, untied and undaunted, for the gridiron classic of the day, and will oppose the

Boy Shot By Son of Sleuth

Paul Dodson, 12, son of City Detective Frank Dodson, homicide squad, got his man while attempting to escape from his "policeman" captor, Roy Winters, 12, of 400 Wabana street, last evening. Winters, with a .32-caliber bullet through his body, is in a serious condition in his home.

The shooting occurred in the Dodson home, 402 Wabana street, last evening, after Dodson, playing "the bandit" had been captured by "Policeman" Winters, when the boys were playing burglar.

Winters was marching his "prisoner" to a cell in the Dodson home when the "prisoner," armed with two revolvers, wheeled and fired. The bullet passed through Winters' body. Drs. Frank Neeley and Edgar T. Chatham, Perrysville avenue, said the boy's condition was too serious to permit removal to a hospital. The bullet entered the right breast and made an exit in the back. It was found in his clothing.

SIMPLIFIED CALENDAR URGED HERE

Voicing the opinion of a large number of Pittsburgh business men, F. E. Troutman, chairman of the board of directors of the Standard Plate Glass Company, today expressed himself as unequivocally in favor of the change in the calendar advocated by George Eastman, of the Eastman Kodak Company; Dr. C. F. Marvin, chief of the United States Weather Bureau, and others.

The plan contemplates dividing the year into 13 months of four weeks each. They would account for 364 days. The three hundred and sixty-fifth day would be New Year's Day, a holiday not pertaining to any week or month, and not to be counted in any weekly or monthly financial reckoning. Each Leap Year under the plan would have an extra and

HOUSEWORK NO JEST

Mrs. George O Thurn, who will direct the Sun-Telegraph Free Cooking School next week in Memorial Hall, Fifth avenue, has no foolish ideas about housework being a game and a merry jest for the thousands of women who are engaged in that profession. She knows it is a regular job to be given serious consideration and thoughtful attention in order to lift it out of the class of drudgery. She is enthusiastic about the wonderful new labor saving devices and housekeeping equipment which are now available. She is firmly convinced that an interest in new dishes, new ways to cook familiar foods, and new ways to plan menus all help make housekeeping interesting. She also believes that half the hard work of homemaking results because many women do not regard it as a profession and be-

PNEUMONIA MENACES FALL; SINCLAIR "FIX" CHARGE HELD UP

"OIL KING" BELIEVED SNARED

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—The condition of Albert B. Fall, ex-secretary of the interior and central figure in the Teapot Dome conspiracy case, was reported "about the same" today.

The former cabinet officer is "a very sick man," according to his physicians. He is suffering from congestion of the lungs, and is threatened with pneumonia. His health has been poor since the beginning of his troubles with the government over the oil lease.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(AP.)—Called together in an extraordinary Saturday session, a grand jury in the District of Columbia courts was asked today to follow through new avenues the meanderings of the private detectives who hovered about the Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy trial.

Although there were indications that some days might elapse before the grand jurors reported, it already was apparent that the soft tread of these detectives, inquiring into the lives of the dozen men and women on the trial jury, had involved Harry F. Sinclair, the wealthy oil operator, in perhaps the most serious of all the charges brought against him since he signed his name to the Teapot Dome lease.

The government did not await the report of the grand jury to lay its complaint against a millionaire who has had more difficulties with the law in the past few years than perhaps has any of the other wealthy men of his day. It laid against him a charge of conspiracy to tamper with the trial jury, to stand alongside the other charges—criminal conspiracy to defraud the government in the oil lease and contempt of the [illegible]. A complaint on the newest [illegible], issued yesterday, still was [illegible]g today, but government at[illegible]s said it would not be served [illegible]m for the present.

MAY MAKE FOSTER PAY IF "NAT" ISN'T FOUND

County Controller C. C. McGovern, resuming his audit today, announced that unless County Treasurer Samuel D. Foster produces Nat Brown, the mysterious member of the county payroll, he would surcharge Foster for all moneys paid to Brown and take "other legal action to protect the public's interests."

McGovern's threat, read into the record, came after Samuel S. Klingensmith, cashier in Foster's office, had testified that he did not know of a Nat Brown being a guard for the county paymaster.

Brown's identity has been a matter of conjecture for more than a week in McGovern's hearings. Orders from McGovern to the treasurer's office to produce Brown in person have failed of fulfillment and McGovern has proceeded in an attempt to prove that the man is really a phantom.

The Controller resumed his attack on the Brown angle after he had questioned further, Attorney Henry Oliver Evans, secretary of the Taxpayers' Committee of Allegheny county, which is sponsoring the "Facts" advertisements.

Evans corrected two mistakes he said he had made in Friday's testimony and he vigorously denied McGovern's intimation that $14,446.96 in liens had been brought against him for school tax.

"Do you," McGovern asked the man who organized the Taxpayers' Committee, "believe taxes should be paid promptly?"

Evans' answer was a vigorous affirmative.

said, with the signing of the Declaration of Independence:

"Now we must all hang together or assuredly we shall all hang separately."

Hanging would have been the fate of all those devoted patriots who revolted against British misrule and who laid the foundation of the future greatness of this country on the corner stones of freedom and justice—of human rights and liberties.

It took more than courage, also, to build as well for the future as our fathers did—to create a system of government which has maintained liberty and happiness and progress and prosperity for this nation throughout its whole existence and which has been an inspiration and an example to liberty-loving people throughout the world.

Those of us who fail to appreciate the courage and ability and the wisdom and the foresight of our GREAT Americans are themselves not GOOD Americans.

Those that laugh at Mayor Thompsan's desire to keep the spirit of patriotism alive in our country are either very unpatriotic themselves or they are very dull and thoughtless.

Mayor Thompson's effort to keep the detractors of our great Americans out of American schools is a noble effort and is worthy of emulation in other cities and other states.

As a matter of fact, the crusade to have American children taught American history, and not foreign propaganda, is not confined to Chicago and to Illinois.

The "British" school books have been thrown out of schools in various states, notably in New York, in New Jersey, in Wisconsin, in Indiana, in Oregon, in Washington and in California, and this paper hopes that the movement will spread to all the states.

The movement can be advanced considerably if the good people of various states, who thought they were electing serious men and good Americans as mayors and found that they had only elected laughing jackasses, would replace these clowns with thoughtful Americans like Mayor Thompson, who understood the necessity of maintaining American ideals in the minds of our American children, the American citizens of the future.

Guardian And Child Vanish

A father's attempt to gain possession of his 4-year-old daughter was foiled today when it was learned a few minutes before the time set for a court hearing that the child and her present guardian had disappeared.

Love for another's child was offered as the motive for the disappearance of Mrs. Abe L. Garfield, 825 North Sheridan avenue, when the father, Charles Nussbaum, of 5851 Nicholson street, appeared in Common Pleas Court to argue for the right to have the company of his daughter, Anna Jewel Nussbaum.

Counsel for Nussbaum, Attorney Jacob Seligsohn, revealed that deputies had been unable to find Mrs. Garfield to serve court papers on her and that she had disappeared last night with the child.

Nussbaum said that when his first wife died he gave Mrs. Garfield permission to rear the child a short time. He remarried a year ago and she refused to give up Anna Jewel, Nussbaum explained, insisting that the attachment between them was too deep to be broken.

of a balloonist, believed to be that of Capt. Hawthorne C. Gray, who took off from Belleville, Ill., in an attempt to establish a world's altitude record, was taken from a wrecked balloon near here today. The balloon had landed in a tree on a farm several miles to the south.

Capt. Gray left Scott Field at Belleville at 2:22 p. m. yesterday, accompanied by four escort planes. The planes lost sight of him in the clouds over Illinois yesterday afternoon. At the time he was headed in the direction of the Ohio valley and Kentucky in his free balloon.

Winds of a 50-mile velocity were reported by pilots of the airplanes who landed late yesterday in Kentucky. They expressed the belief last night that he might have landed in the mountains o feastern Kentucky.

A farmer reported seeing the balloon early this morning and news of the discovery spread rapidly. Hundreds of persons rushed to the scene, about eight miles from Sparta, and an undertaker went there to bring the body here.

Details of the affair were meager in Sparta. The farmer reported that the balloon was wrecked and that there was a man in it, but told little more about it.

GUARD EATS CANDY; MADE ILL

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 5.—(AP.)—Sheriff William Anderson and city officials were making an investigation today to ascertain whether an attempt was made on the life of George Remus, who is being held prisoner in the Hamilton county jail for the slaying of his wife, Imogene, by means of poisoned candy.

The former bootleg king received a box of candy, bearing a New York postmark, yesterday which was reported to contain pison. Officials were inclined to believe that it was a practical joke or a fake, but they turned the candy over to the city chemist for analysis.

The candy, in a tin container, addressed in a feminine hand, arrived by mail and was turned over to Remus.

Remus passed the container to some of the jail guards and took a piece himself.

Biting into the candy, Remus, who at one time was a chemist, detected the presence in the candy of a substance which he said tasted like strychnine.

He cautioned the guards not to eat the candy, but Samuel McQueen, one of them, already had swallowed a piece and asserted that it made him ill. Emetics were administered and McQueen's stomach was cleared of its contents. However, a rise in his temperature was noted and he was placed in a bed at the county jail.

The package did not bear a return address.

Ruth Bids Farewell To Paris

PARIS, Nov. 5.—(AP.)—Ruth Elder and Capt. George Haldeman, who arrived in Paris by plane last week, but not in the ill-fated American Girl, in which they hoped to fly here from New York, departed from Paris by train this morning.

They bid farewell to Paris when they boarded the boat train for Cherbourg, where they will sail on the steamship Aquitania to New York. From the hundreds of French and Americans who cheered them as they left came the cry, "Come back again."

The fliers' compartment was filled with flowers. Ruth's eyes were misty as she cried first "Goodby" and then "Au revoir."

HOLD THREE IN FUR THEFT

Three men in an automobile early this morning used padded bricks to smash two show windows of the Appleman Fur Company at 826 Penn avenue, and then looted the windows of two fur coats and escaped. The loot consisted of an ermine coat valued at $700 and a squirrel coat valued at $300. The damage to the windows was estimated at $150.

A short time after the robbery police arrested three young men in an automobile in Webster avenue. The prisoners said they were Charles Waddell, 21, of 1414 Fifth avenue, Vincent Christi, 27, of 549½ Protectory place, and James Savena, 24, of 1808 Webster avenue. They were using a "drive-it-yourself" car at the time of the arrest and a car of this description had been used by the robbers, police say.

ously affected, the flood waters poured over into other New England states, New York and the province of Quebec, tearing buildings and ripping bridges from their foundations.

NO PLANE AVAILABLE

BURLINGTON, Vt., Nov. 5.—(AP.)—Efforts to employ an airplane here this morning to reach Barre and Montpelier, where many persons were reported to have perished in the flood, proved fruitless, the only plane available in this section being in Milton, completely shut off from the outside world. Highways as well as railroads and wire service to this town were completely crippled.

FRANKLIN, N. H., Nov. 5.—(AP.)—The large Eastman Falls dam on the Pemigewasset River here was saved today by sand bags hastily piled by a large crew of volunteers, although one end of the big structure was dangerously weakened by the flood.

The rising of the Merrimack and Pemigewasset rivers flooded 50 houses, the Sulloway mills and many business establishments and forced hundreds to leave their homes.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 5.—(INS.)—Sections of the south county of Rhode Island today were 15 feet under water.

Reports from the entire state revealed two deaths, a dozen bridges down, 20 factories closed and thousands out of work.

Rowboats were used to rescue residents in sections of Providence, Pawtucket, Woonsocket and other communities.

M'GOVERN HITS AT ARMSTRONG

A petition asking the court to set aside a court order made two years ago which relieved County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong from payment of a surcharge of $7,872, was presented in Common Pleas Court yesterday in behalf of Controller Charles G. McGovern. By vacating the former order, Armstrong will be obliged to pay the surcharge which was made in 1921 by former Controller John P. Moore.

The amount involved was alleged to be money due the county from dog taxes and other levies received while Armstrong was county treasurer. Judge Ambrose B. Reid, before whom the petition was presented, said he would give his decision later.

WARNING GIVEN COLLEGES

A warning against standardization of colleges was given yesterday by Dean F. J. Kelly, of the University of Minnesota, at the meeting of the fourteenth annual conference of the Association of Urban Colleges at the Carnegie Institute of Technology. Dr. Kelly criticized the exertion of influence upon an institution to make it like another institution except in schools where a positive improvement was sighted.

The conference will end today with election of officers and a public meeting this morning in Carnegie Union. Education for adults will be discussed, and all night school principals and high school teachers are invited to attend. Dr. William M. Davidson, superintendent of public schools will preside.

Ingles, 22, of 7 East Forest avenue, Bellevue, whose companion, W. J. Donald, 25, of 147 Ralph avenue, Bellevue, suffered cuts on the face.

At the left is the new Panhandle bridge span being built alongside the old structure. The old bridge on the right will be moved aside and the new truss will be moved into place, within an hour, so timed that it will not interfere with the operation of trains. The work will be complete about January 1.

Mr. Given died June 28, 1919, and Mr. Braun and Mr. Moore were executors of the estate.

CHURCH TO HOLD ANNIVERSARY

The Tenth United Presbyterian Church, Suismon and Middle streets, North Side, of which the Rev. Robert McVey Campbell is pastor, will celebrate its thirty-second anniversary tomorrow. Improvements have been made during the past year which make the building as attractive as on the day of its dedication. Two years ago the congregation faced the closing of the church through discouragement and lack of interest. But there has since been a gain in membership and a revival of enthusiasm. The church traces its origin to a mission Sunday school established in the Third Ward, Allegheny, by the First and Second Presbyterian churches of that city in 1857.

SWEETEST!

HER NAME'S HAZEL

Miss Hazel Goodwin, typist, appropriately enough was given the title "The Sweetest Girl in New York," at the Candy and Ice Cream Exposition in Grand Central Palace. Hazel was the unanimous choice of the crowds attending the event, and of the judges of the contest. Her crown brought to her a monetary prize, a huge box of candy and, last but not least, the acclaim of that portion of New York's population able to crowd its way into Grand Central Palace.

Mrs. Mary E. B. Gordon, widow of George B. Gordon, is left $100,000 outright and a life interest in a trust fund of the same amount, in the will of the late Pennsylvania Railroad attorney, filed for probate in the office of Joseph N. Mackrell, register of wills.

The will, dated some years before Mr. Gordon's death, specified that in the event his wife died before him, then various charitable institutions would inherit part of the $500,000 estate. On the death of his widow, Attorney Gordon's brother, Alexander, Jr., inherits one-half of the $100,000 trust fund, with the other half divided between his nephews, John Hamlin and Alexander Gordon III. Alexander Gordon, Jr., and his wife, Emma W. Gordon, are left $5,000 each outright, while the nephews are bequeathed $2,500 each. Miss Clara I. Houston, his secretary, is given $2,500.

HALF BALLOTS ALTERED

More than half of the 181 ballots found in the box of the Fifth District of the Twentieth Ward were marked by alterations of some sort, the committee recounting the vote of the primary election reported to the court yesterday. Twenty-one specimen ballots had been marked and used as official ballots and the ballots were so wet from weather that two were mutilated and could not be counted.

The cross beside the name of Charles C. McGovern had been erased on 19 of the ballots and a cross had been placed after the name of Robert G. Woodside. Too many crosses and erasures in the judiciary column resulted in ten of the ballots being voided. In the councilmanic column there were erasures in 49 cases after the name of John J. Ford, and in five cases after the names of independent candidates.

The report of the committee states that the "organization slate for judge each received 10 to 14 more votes than the recount showed. Woodside for controller was given 145 votes when the recount showed 119. For council the four slated candidates were given from 59 to 63 more votes than the recount gave them.

An order was made by Common Pleas Court impounding the ballot boxes of the Twenty-first District of the Eighth Ward and the Twelfth District of the Twenty-first Ward.

6 FOUND GUILTY OF DEFRAUDING

Benjamin Sheinman, who formerly conducted a dry goods store at 1200 Fifth avenue, under the name of Sheinman & Co.; his three brothers, William, Max and Abe Sheinman; Meyer Luber and J. Fierman, were convicted Friday in the Federal District Court after a five-day trial in which Benjamin Sheinman was charged with concealing assets from a receiver in bankruptcy and the other five defendants with aiding and abetting him. Joseph Rabinowitz, a partner in the Fifth avenue store, also a defendant, pleaded guilty before the start of the trial and appeared as the chief government witness.

The suit was strenuously fought, with the defense represented by Attorney R. P. Marshall and the government by Assistant United States District Attorney Raymond D. Evans. Judge R. M. Gibson presided.

Government witnesses testified that shortly before an involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed against the concern, December 18, 1924, the company purchased more than $40,000 worth of merchandise in New York and reshipped a large quantity of it to Luber & Fierman in Philadelphia.

The results of a preliminary investigation made by the National Credit Men's Association was turned over to the Department of Justice, which brought the suit in behalf of the government. The defendants will be sentenced later.

Will Expected Ford to Give 'Em Away

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Nov. 5.—Everybody is just tickled to death over the new Ford plan. But I was just a little disappointed in it. I thought sure after his waiting all this time that he was going to give 'em away. Course renting 'em ain't bad. I bet you the next time some other concern gets to crowding him he will give 'em to us.

WILL ROGERS

I hereby put in my order for the first one that lights in California. I think I will get two or three. I always did want to go out in the morning and choose my car. Yours,

WILL ROGERS.

P. S.—Thanks for the birthday greetings. I was trying to keep it quiet.

CRUSADER'S WIFE MRS. KING NOT LOCATED

With relatives of William L. King, missing vice crusader, announcing that they had not heard from the Citizens' League head since his disappearance and that they were anxious for his safety, it also was learned that no trace has been found of his wife, who was last heard of in San Francisco nearly two weeks ago.

Mrs. C. A. Hearne, of Oskaloosa, Ia., a sister of Mrs. King, last night inquired here by telephone about her sister. She has not received word since Mrs. King wrote to her from San Francisco. The league officials here are still endeavoring to locate Mr. King, but they are putting most of their efforts in preparing their cases for court.

Director James M. Clark of the Department of Public Safety and Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh were flayed for the publicity given affidavits attacking the league, in an open letter sent to Director Clark by the Rev. Dr. W. Wofford T. Duncan, pastor of the Emory Methodist Episcopal Church. Dr. Duncan said that the publicity given the affidavits looked "as if it were political propaganda to discredit the league and bolster up Mayor Kline's administration."

FORGER FLEECES MANY HERE

A number of wealthy Pittsburghers were among the victims of August Arthur Aggerbeck, forger and alleged head of a band of swindlers, now under arrest in Chicago, according to Inspector Clyde S. Edeburn, of the City Detective Bureau. During the last five years Aggerbeck is said to have obtained loot estimated at $500,000. He was arrested in Pittsburgh in 1912 and sentenced to the Western Penitentiary for six years for his part in a $10,000 forgery, police say.

ACQUITTAL OF WOMAN IN CASE ASSURED

When the trial of the defendants in the McKeesport whisky conspiracy case, being heard before Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker, adjourned Friday afternoon until Monday, only 15 of the 29 men and women indicted in the case were on trial, as four of them were never apprehended, six others have entered pleas of guilty and four others were dropped when the government rested, because of insufficient evidence.

When the government closed its case with the testimony of Alfred Rasps, a former motorcycle policeman in McKeesport, Assistant United States District Attorney Ralph H. Smith did not oppose the motion of Attorney W. H. Coleman to have the court direct acquittals for Mrs. Therese Bergstein; her son, Adolph Bergstein; her brother-in-law, Morris Bergstein, all of Locust street, McKeesport, and Nathan Friedman.

The latter is a brother of Charles Friedman of Versailles, described by the prosecution as the leader of a huge bootleg ring in the McKeesport district. Five of the six defendants who pleaded testified as government witnesses, and implicated many of the defendants in alleged liquor traffic. Attorney Coleman in his opening address indicated that all the defendants would testify in their own behalf.

Among the latter who testified Friday afternoon was "Big Dave" Klein, who denied making the statement, presented in evidence by the government as having been made by Klein after his arrest, in which he was alleged to have involved Charles Friedman and others on trial in liquor transactions. Other defendants who testified were John Pyechor, Sr., John Pyechor, Jr., Morris Shamowitz and Glenn J. Barrows.

NINTH LESSON

BIRD MUSIC

The pretty Bluebirds sing
  Cheer! 'tis an early spring!
The glad Meadow Lark
  Warbles from dawn till dark,
But Robin sings low to his mate.

The gentle Turtle Dove
  Coos to his lady love —
The wild Mocking Bird
  High on the bough is heard —
But I stand wond'ring — elate!

—W. Otto Miessner.

This week's lesson is a tribute to the world's original musicians, our feathered friends, the birds.

Who has not marveled at their wild untutored Music? What human throat could hope to match the note of nightingale or mocking bird?

Ever since men began to write, poets of all ages, climes and lands, have been inspired by these beloved songsters.

Musicians, too, have borrowed their melodies from them — Haydn, in his "Seasons," Beethoven, in his "Pastoral Symphony," Wagner, in his opera, "Siegfried." Edgar Stillman Kelley, our own great American composer, in his "New England" Symphony, has based an entire movement upon bird themes.

Two New Pieces

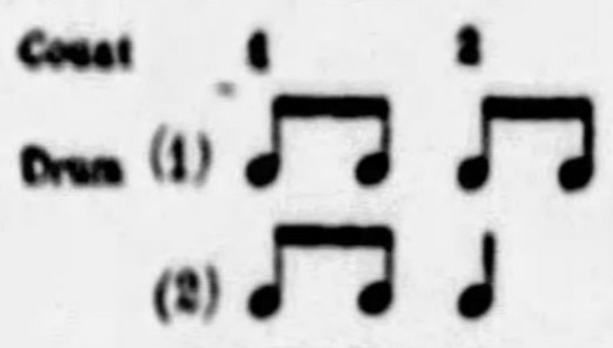
"Lady Bird" and "Mocking Bird" are your two companion pieces for this week. They are in the bright key of A Major — a new key to you in print — but quite familiar, in practice. This is the advantage of your having transposed some of your other pieces into A Major. For now you will see how simple it is to play in three sharps!

As before, let us analyze, examine, scrutinize, study! Everything is simple if we can reduce it to its smallest parts, its elements. However, to maintain our interest, these elements must have sense, must make meaning. First, then, the Rhythm.

1—Rhythm

Study the measure signature.
How many beats in each measure?
What note gets one beat?
How many different rhythmic motifs?

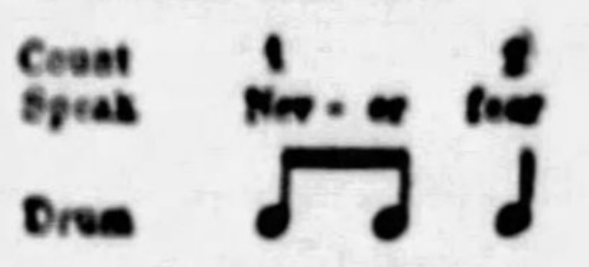
Let me help you with this last question. These are the two measure rhythms in the R. H. Melody:



The first rhythm you have had before in

To a River
Little Wooden Shoes
My Pony
The Tenor Drum

The second is new. It sounds like this:



Drum both measure rhythms, separately.
How many times does (1) occur in "Lady Bird?"
How many times does (2) occur?
Now drum the rhythm of the entire piece.

2—Melody

From this point on, I shall omit the chart or diagram showing the tone-names of the Melody, which are printed, already, below the words of the song. This was done, heretofore to help you feel the rhythm.

(a) Study the Key Signature.
  How many sharps?
  Name them, from left to right.
  Where is Do on the staff?
  What is Do's letter name?
  In what major key is the piece?
  Name the letter-names for Do, Re, Mi, Fa, So.

(b) Learn the Melodic Motifs.
  1—Re, Re, Do, Do occurs how often?
  2—Fa, Mi, Re, Do occurs how often?
  3—Mi, Re, Do occurs how often?
  4—Re, So, Do occurs how often?

(c) Locate each motif and frame in the piece.
(d) Name the letter-names of each motif.
(e) Play the Melody, practicing phrase-wise.
(f) Play the Melody, complete.
  First time, use the Key-Finder. Thereafter, follow the notes.

3—Harmony

Here you see a new form of broken chord — with the chord divided into two parts, or segments, each written as an eighth note. The V-I Chord-motif in the first measure is:

Count    1          2
              So          So
         Ti         Do
              Fa          Mi
         V          I

Count and play this four times, first with the Chord-Finder, then following the notes.

How many times does this occur in the piece?
Frame it each time it occurs.
Name the letters of the I and V chords.
The IV Chord motif first occurs in the third measure, like this:

Count    1          2
              La          Le
         Do         Do
              Fa          Fa

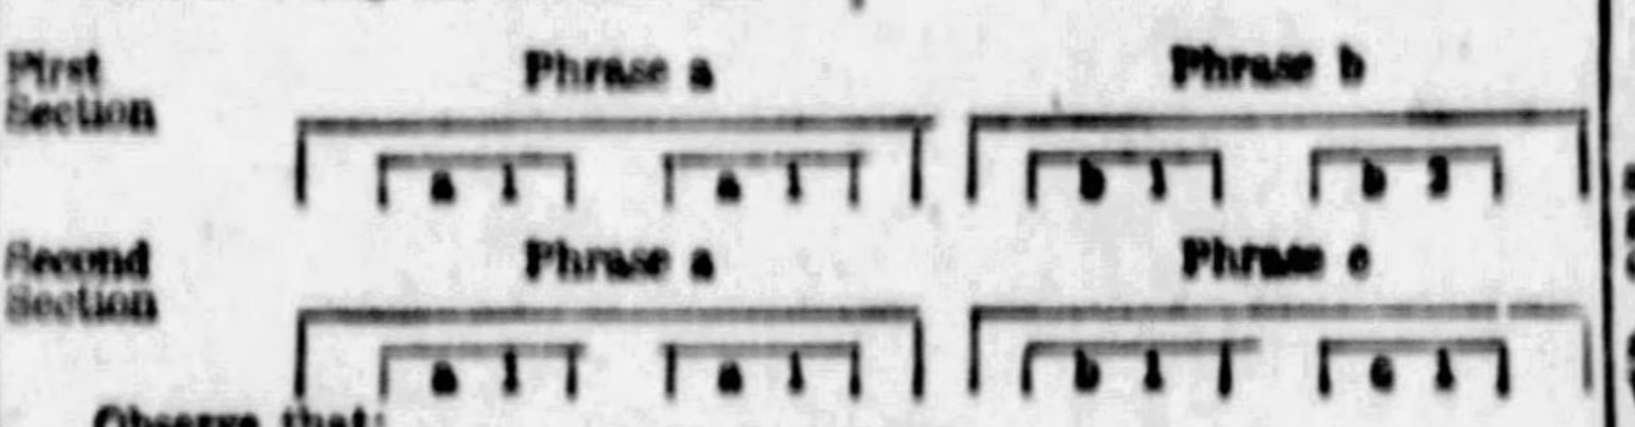
Notice the new sign ♮ called a natural (also called cancel). This means that F natural (the white key) is played instead of F sharp (the black key) demanded by the Key Signature. This sign cancels the sharp in the signature, but only during the measure in which it is used. Remember this! This changes the sound and color of the IV chord which we call a minor IV Chord, or minor sub-dominant. This will be explained later.

How often do you find this in the piece?
Name the letter names of the IV Chord.
Play it four times, first with the Chord-Finder, then following the notes.

The last measure ends with V-I.
The V Chord is broken but the I Chord is solid.
Play the L. H. accompaniment separately, complete. If you halt or stumble in a single measure, practice that measure, slowly, four times.

4—Form

This is a diagram of the Form.



Observe that:
  Each phrase consists of two motifs.
  Each section consists of two phrases.
  The two sections form a complete period.
You should now play and memorize this piece in a few minutes.

5—Mood

All the foregoing has shown you how to master the mechanical side of playing the piece, reading it, memorizing it. Your study is not complete until you have decided upon the mood and how you will express or interpret it.

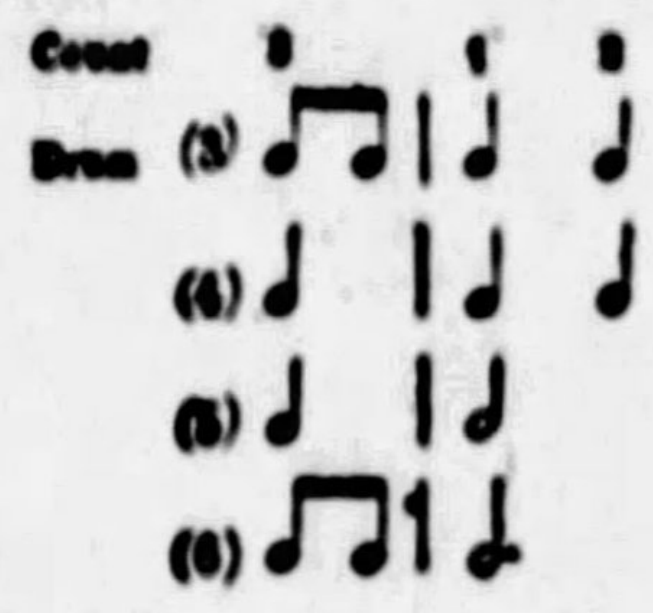
My suggestion is that it should be very tender, songlike or lyric. The R. H. Melody, however, should sing out, keeping the L. H. accompaniment soft and subdued.

If you have followed the above directions, analyzing, practicing and memorizing each motif and phrase separately, then I feel sure that you can now give this piece a finished, artistic performance — one that will delight your friends.

The Mocking Bird

1—Rhythm

Study the measure signature.
How many beats in each measure?
What note gets one beat?
There are four rhythmic motifs—
  Two are familiar. Which?
  Two are new. Which?



You will find the two familiar motifs (numbers 2 and 3) in "Happiness." How often in "The Mocking Bird?" Observe that all of these cross the measure-bar and that the true measure is counted 3, 1, 2.

Be sure to feel the time of the two eighth notes at the very beginning of the first phrase which begins on the third count. They occur again, later.

As before, count and drum these. Copy and mount on cards, for Eye Drill. Let someone play them — you name them by calling the notes.

Drum the rhythm of the R. H. Melody.

2—Melody

(a) Study the Key Signature.
  Name the sharps.
  Locate Do on the staff.
  Name the Key.
(b) Learn the melodic motifs.

      3          1    2
(1)   Mi    Fa   Mi   Re    occurs how often?
(2)   Re         Do   Mi    occurs how often?
(3)   Mi         So   Re    occurs how often?
(4)   Re         So   —     occurs how often?
(5)   Re    Mi   Do   —     occurs how often?

(c) Locate and frame each motif in the piece.
(d) Name the letter-names of each motif.
(e) Play the Melody, practicing phrase-wise.
(f) Play the Melody, complete. First time use the Key-Finder, thereafter, follow the notes.

3—Harmony

Observe still another form of broken chord — with the chord divided into two parts and the second part repeated.

1     2     3              1     2     3
Ti    So    So             Do    So    So
      Fa    Fa                   Mi    Mi
V                          I

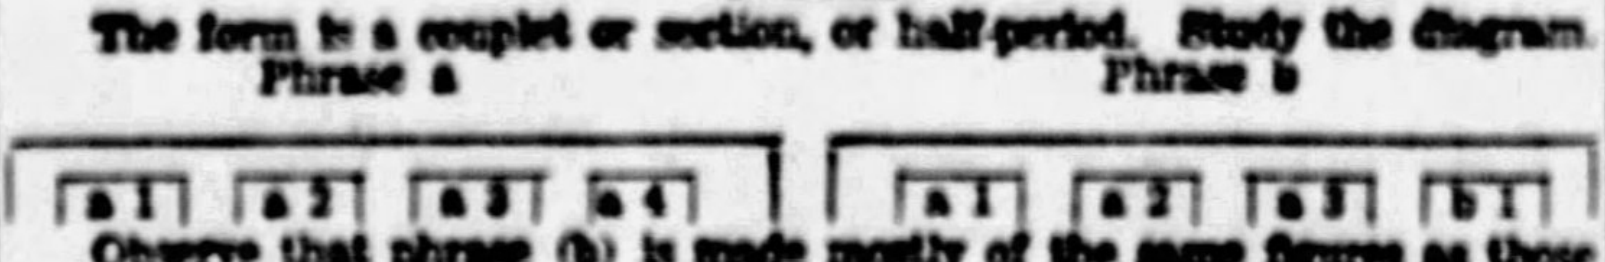
Each chord fills a three-beat measure. It is the form of chord generally used in waltz time or in waltz music.

How many measures contain the V Chord?
How many measures contain the I Chord?
Play the L. H. accompaniment separately, through complete.

4—Form

The form is a couplet or section, or half-period. Study the diagram.



Observe that phrase (b) is made mostly of the same figures as those in phrase (a).

In playing "The Mocking Bird" with both hands, remember that the R. H. Melody begins on the third beat with Mi, Fa, while the L. H. rests. The L. H. begins playing on the next beat (the first beat of the next measure).

5—Mood

The Mood is very like that of "Lady Bird." Play it slowly, smoothly, sweetly, letting the Melody sing out above the accompaniment.

Both of these melodies are folk songs, known and loved for many, many years. One is French, the other German, but each is loved in both countries. Music needs no other language, for Music has a language of its own that all people understand. Music is the language of the heart, not of the head!

Writing Music

I would heartily recommend that you practice copying the Music of the pieces that you have learned to play. It may interest you to know how my own interest in composing music was awakened. It all came about through my copying a hymn-tune for my Sunday school teacher, when I was very young!

You can buy a blank music book at any music store. Before copying the notes, take these steps:

1—Join pairs of staffs with a vertical bar and braces.
2—Write in the Clefs and Signature.
3—Write the Measure Sign.
4—Divide the staff into its measures, as in the printed piece.
5—Write (copy) the Melody.
6—Copy the words.
7—Copy the Chords.

I fully realize that this may be a "strain on your patience," and I shall not expect all of you to do it. Still, so many Melody Way boys and girls have sent in their original compositions to me, that I feel it my duty to help them to start right.

Who knows but there may be a future Beethoven or a Schubert, or an Edward MacDowell among these very boys and girls of The Melody Way Club?

cause they go at it in a haphazard manner. Simple, comfortable working clothes help take the hard work out of sweeping, bed making, washing, ironing and cooking.

Mrs. Thurn, who must stand hours when lecturing and cooking before her classes chooses comfortable, well made, arch supporting shoes. Her aprons and dresses are comfortably loose, not too long, and they are wide enough to easily step about the platform. She dresses in the same kind of clothes when she is working about her own house.

"No worn out, high-heeled party slippers for me," she declared. "They are all right for parties and dancing, but I want comfort when I have work to do. If women would only realize how much more quickly house work is done if the mind and body are free from any restraint!"

After comfortable working clothes comes a comfortable kitchen, according to this housekeeping authority. There should be plenty of light and air, a stool or chair on which to sit whenever the job can be done sitting down, and other equipment chosen with a view to its labor-saving qualities as well as its efficiency.

There will be many new labor and time-saving ideas demonstrated at the cooking classes next week. The kitchen has been equipped with the newest in gas, refrigerators, ranges, utensils and cutlery, all chosen from stocks of enterprising local dealers.

The foods used in the cookery are on sale in every grocery store in Pittsburgh, but Mrs. Thurn will use these familiar products in new recipes, and give out copies of the recipes after each lecture. New kinds of cookery, and the dietetical importance of foods will be compared. An opportunity will be given to show how aluminum cooking saucepans may be kept bright and shining, how the kitchen cutlery may be kept toned up and stainless, how other kitchen metals as well as the dishes are easily washed and dried.

Then the audience will be invited to inspect the kitchen at close range and to ask questions on the demonstrations as well as on other phases of home-making. The lecturer wants the women of Pittsburgh to consider the Sun-Telegraph school as a housekeeping information headquarters for the entire week and to bring their problems on cookery, selection of kitchen equipment and any other housekeeping ideas to her for discussion. The experienced housekeeper will be as welcome as the bride and the high school domestic science girl. The doors open at 1 o'clock and the lecture starts at 2, on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday afternoons, and 7:30 o'clock Thursday night.

Mrs. Thurn will be glad to have the women of Pittsburgh ask her questions on the subject discussed that day in the lecture, as well as on any other housekeeping questions which have been bothering them. She recommends that the women who will make up her audience next week, plan their housework so that they can be free on the three afternoons and the night of the school. "Visit your grocers in the mornings, and urge the ice man and the milk man and all the other tradespeople who call at the kitchen door throughout the day, to come early in the mornings—or market on the way to the lecture and bring your bundles along. If your husband is used to late dinner, come to the cooking school first and plan your dinner while at the school, then market on the way home."

SIMPLIFIED CALENDAR

similar independent legal holiday to be known as "Correction Day."

"Since the present arrangement of the months is not based on astronomical facts, but is a purely arbitrary arrangement devised by Roman emperors, partly or largely to satisfy their own vanity," said Mr. Troutman, "and since it is annoying and confusing to business men operating on a monthly basis to have the months vary in length, I am heartily in favor of the proposed change.

"As I told Mr. Eastman in a recent letter, after having carefully considered the question I have come to the conclusion that it would be a decided advantage to industry as a whole and can see no reasons why this change cannot be accomplished.

"Any business man who has had anything to do with the handling of production sheets will appreciate the benefits that would come from it. You find that your production for a month shows considerable variation from that of another month in which conditions were about the same, and you are puzzled to account for the discrepancy. You find on investigation that one month had one, two or three fewer working days than the other.

"The simplicity of the proposed calendar would benefit almost everybody. The only people who would suffer would be the calendar printers. The reform would be a blow to them because there would be no further need of printed calendars. Everybody would carry the calendar in his head. If one knew the day or the date it would not be necessary to inquire 'what date is this?' or 'what day is it?' For Sunday would always be the first, eighth, fifteenth or twenty-second of the month; Monday the second, ninth, sixteenth or twenty-third and so forth.

"There would not be the shifting of holidays that now causes so much confusion and annoyance. The Fourth of July would always fall on a Wednesday, Christmas always on a Wednesday—unless it should be seen fit to change the holidays so as to make them come on a Monday or Saturday, and so give the benefit of a two-day rest, as some have suggested. That, however, is of little importance as compared with the advantages that would be had along other lines.

"I have in mind commercial considerations which I think transcend all others in arguments for the reform of the calendar. Think what an improvement it would be to have the working month always begin on a Monday, always have the same number of days, and be exactly divisible into four weeks. Think how it would facilitate matters to have weekly wages and expenses harmonize with monthly rents, accounts and bills. Vast economies would be made possible under the proposed arrangement."

Mr. Troutman said he had a list of Pittsburgh business men who have indorsed the reform. It is expected that sooner or later the Chamber of Commerce will be asked to consider the project and give it its sanction.

The League of Nations, which has become interested, has given stimulus to the plan by calling representatives of the great branches of the Christian church into a conference to discuss the advisability of making Easter a fixed instead of a movable date depending on the time when the moon is full.

Dr. Marvin, chief of the Weather Bureau, has long been urging the change, not only because it would simplify meteorological and other scientific records, but also because of advantages to economic, agricultural, civic, educational and business interests in having all months and quarters exactly alike, and the numbered days of each month always falling on the same day of the week. The plan, it is argued, would do away with many existing difficulties in the compilation of accurate comparative statistics in accounting and banking, and in the computation of interest.

She is She -:- Becky is Fearless -:- Bangs Are Back

ANN MILBURN is the girl in "The Girl From Child's," which comes to the Nixon next week.

JEANNE EAGELS, who comes to the Pitt next week in "Her Cardboard Lover," has her hair cut sassy.

Cecil De Mille Sends Many Mack Sennett Comedians on Way to Stardom on Screen

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,

(Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.)

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 5.

THE somber note in Cecil De Mille's drama, "The Godless Girl," certainly doesn't suggest comedy. Yet, for the very first player chosen he takes Eddie Quillan, an erstwhile Mack Sennett comedian, and puts him under contract.

Come to think of it, Friend C. B. always did have a yen for taking Sennett players out of their comedy bondage and leading them into the dignified realms of drama. Gloria Swanson was a dimpled-kneed bathing beauty when De Mille starred her in a series of exotic dramas, where she wore eccentric headdresses and clothes that gave her the reputation of being filmland's favorite clothes horse.

Bebe Daniels was also with Sennett and later with Harold Lloyd when De Mille saw her and invited her to become a De Mille star. Vera Reynolds is also a member of the Sennett alumni and so is Phyllis Haver and Marie Prevost, so you see, with that history, naturally, Eddie Quillan is sure a golden opportunity is at hand.

The leads in the De Mille drama are still uncertain.

Cupid is always interfering in motion pictures. A producer these days never knows when he signs an actor, or actress, whether he or she will decide to get married before the picture starts. Here we have Leila Hyams, who was cast as the secretary in "The Lion and the Mouse," deciding to go to New York and say "Yes" to Charles Berg. What could Warners do but look around and get another leading lady, realizing the publicity value of "The Lion and the Mouse," well-known in every hamlet and village? Hence, they pick out one of their best stars, May McAvoy, and put her in the role of secretary. With May in the cast, they get a prominent lion and sign Lionel Barryore. Alec Francis, who was originally slated as the lion, remains in the cast as Judge Rossmore. Emmett Corrigan, the well-known stage star, will also have an important part. Looks to me as if Darryl Zanuck, who is supervising this production, suddenly discovered that he had a bigger asset than he realized. At any rate, Warners are going to make "The Lion and the Mouse" a bigger and better production than originally planned, or I miss my guess. Some of the characters will actually speak lines through the courtesy of Vitaphone. These are great days! Lloyd Bacon remains on the job as director.

Louis Wolheim seems to have reconciled himself to the cruel fate that forbids his playing a gorgeous Romeo or a gay Lothario. The face that he longed to have beautified by plastic surgery when a movie contract interfered, is to continue to do business at the old stand. He has agreed to play Bozo in "Hell's Angels," another ruffian character, which he does well. He made us like his face so that most of us will be glad that he cannot have it relandscaped. But the fact remains he is a good actor and good actors are too valuable to lose. That's why Howard Hughes restrained him through legal action from a plastic operation and that's why this same Howard Hughes, president of the Caddo Company, signed him for an important role in "Hell's Angels."

While I'm on the subject of "Hell's Angels," Ben Lyon, who was chosen by Millarde Webb for the lead in "Honeymoon Flats" and then had to send his regrets because of a previous engagement with Howard Hughes, is now able to keep both engagements. "Honeymoon Flats" has been held up for five weeks to give Millarde Webb an opportunity to put into scenario form an original story he has sold to Universal for Laura La Plante. The title of the Webb opera, I believe, is "The Blonde Brunette."

All any good actress ever needs is a chance. Take Helen Jerome Eddy, who played leads in George Beban's pictures for so many years and then suddenly dropped out of things. Then she was cast as the older sister in Marion Davies picture, "Quality Street," winning success for herself. Now she is at the F. B. O. Studios scheduled to play opposite Ralph Ince in "Chicago After Midnight." Mrs. Ince's sister, Lola Mendez, also has an important role. So things are breaking better for Miss Eddy.

The motion picture producers are just waking up to the lure of California's romatnic history as film material. The early days of the Spanish regime is colorful enough to build almost any sort of tale of love and adventure. Ken Maynard in "Canyon of Adventure," an original story by Marion Jackson, will have old California as the background. Ken Maynard, by the by, has given Charles Rogers, his sponsor and discoverer, the impetus to sign other unknowns.

All of filmland is interested in the Authors' League request that Will H. Hays appear before a special committee of playwrights and authors and explain the film ban that has kept certain plays and novels from the screen. Several years ago, Mr. Hays, in an interview, stated that there had never been any official ban on "The Green Hat," "The Shanghai Gesture," "Rain," and "They Knew What They Wanted." He said the film producers had merely agreed, in an effort to keep the screen clean, not to produce any of these plays. Since that time Paramount-Famous-Lasky has produced "They Knew What They Wanted" under another name, with the censorable portions eliminated, and Gloria Swanson has taken "Sadie Thompson," the original version of "Rain" and made a picture. The league feels the ban is harmful to the authors and is, therefore, attempting to have it removed. The ice has certainly been broken by two of the companies in filming two of the plays that had been originally banned. It will be interesting to see what happens next.

Bang! Bang! Bang! Shots rang through the still night air of Hollywood, wakening the citizens who go to bed in this country village at an early hour. The Hollywood policemen, composed of the finest, were called and told between hysterical gasps, sobs and tremors of fright that a terrible murder was being committed somewhere near Gower street. Ah, another front page Hollywood murder! The entire police force hurried to the scene of gore and horror. What do you think they found? A Chinese-American war being filmed at the Columbia Studios. "Enough for tonight," they told Harry Cohn. "All of Hollywood is complaining." "And to think," said Harry, "of all the money I had tied up in that scene!"

Pretty soon there won't be an appendix or tonsil in Hollywood. They are so unfashionable. Dorothy Phillips is the latest to listen to the call of the tonsil. She is now in the Hollywood Hospital where she has had a tonsil operation.

Symphony Suite With Organ Programs

Symphony No. 5, by Widor, will be featured by Dr. Charles Heinroth at his free organ recital this evening at 8:15 o'clock in Carnegie Music Hall. This is one of the 10 symphonies written by this French composer. Widor is the organist at Saint Sulpice, Paris, and professor at the Conservatoire. Dr. Heinroth will play four movements of this symphony. The program for tonight will open with Weber's overture to "Oberon," this to be followed by Serenade, Schubert; Chinoiserie, Swinnen; four movements from Symphony No. 5 in F Minor, Widor; Speranza, Hope; Apra Notturna, Yon; Passacaglia. The program for 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon includes: Overture to "Mignon," Thomas; Melody, Dawes; Hungarian Dance in D Flat, Brahms; Symphony in D Minor, Haydn; Nocture in A Flat, Ferrata; first movement from Sonata in C Minor, Salome; Madrigal, Simonetti; Polonaise in A Major, Chopin.

Dr. Caspar Koch, city organist, will give the regular free organ recital in Carnegie Hall, North Side, at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Arthur Davis, tenor, and Owen W. Moran, baritone, will be guest soloists, appearing in solos and duets. Among the organ numbers is included Sibelius' "Finlandia," a composition suppressed by the Russian police when Finland was still a Russian province. The program includes: Overture to "Raymond," Thomas; Largo from "New World" Symphony, Dvorak; "Finlandia," Sibelius; tenor solo, "Be Thou Faithful," from "St. Paul," Mendelssohn; "Peer Gynt" Suite, Grieg; baritone solo, "Vision Fugitive," from "Herodiade," Massenet; duet for tenor and baritone, "Solenne in quest'ore," from "La Forza del Destino," Verdi; finale from First Symphony, Vierne.

NEW PROGRAMS IN THEATERS

"The Girl From Child's" is a musical comedy, in which Ann Milburn and Irving Fisher take the leads. "The Girl From Child's" will appear in the Nixon, beginning Monday evening.

Jeanne Eagels comes Monday to the Pitt in a French comedy, "Her Cardboard Lover." Her role is that of a fashionable Pariesienne involved in a strange "triangle" situation.

"My Maryland," the new American operetta, today will close the second week of an engagement which has smashed all records in the Alvin. The demand has been so great that this musical drama will be held over for one more week, beginning Monday night, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Fantasia, "Francesca da Rimini," Op. 32 (after Dante)

The Boston Symphony Orchestra opened the series of the Pittsburgh Orchestra Association in Syria Mosque last night. It is a hopeless task to try to find the reason why the house is never filled for these excellent concerts, while Pittsburghers are turned away from our music halls whn bad singers perform. Those who came were amply repaid.

The Boston Orchestra is now as great an organization as it was before the war. We have watched its rebirth and steady growth under the leadership of Serge Koussevitsky; to praise his work adeqqately I should have to ingle out each choir in his orchestra and bestow individual laurels. I can not recall when we have heard in any other concert such warmth and richness of tone as sung by the violas in the Berlioz overture; the sombre voices of the horns during the symphony came from virtuoso players; the arabesque accompaniments of the woodwinds in Tschakowsky's Fantasia entered and disappeared like nymphs. Under Muck there was tense academic perfection; under Koussevitsky, humor and romance have relieved that formality.

The program itself was a lesson in orchestral development. There was Berlioz who knew more of orchestration than any predecessor and as much as most of his successors; there was a Brahms symphony that came in the composer's mature years—in spite of some tedious moments and obscure phrases for most listeners, it is the work of a sure hand and was played with that feeling of security; there were all the Wagner inventions that filtered into Russian music in the Fantasia; then Debussy's musical legacy was audible in Ravel's delightful suite. But we did not carry away from the concert these historic facts; we came away with the assurance that a few times during the winter Pittsburgh is privileged to listen to the best orchestras in the world, that last night Koussevitsky had proclaimed himself a master and we were exceedingly rich for the experience.

Wonderful to be Going Home, Ruth Says

By RUTH ELDER.

Copyright, 1927, by the New York Daily Mirror.

PARIS, Nov. 5.—Home!

How much this word means to me on the eve of my return to the United States. It seems wonderful to be going home when only three short weeks ago there was a time when it looked as though fate had decided otherwise.

I have had a marvelous time ever since I landed in Europe and it has been especially glorious since I came to Paris. But it is good to be starting back—back to New York, which I left, oh, it seems so long ago.

As long as I live I shall never forget every second of those 25 hours of flying over the Atlantic. I can sit back now and relieve them. I shall never be able to forget the moment when I crawled to the rear of the plane to get my life-preserver suit on, when George and I did not know whether there would be time to get into them before the crash.

Nor shall I ever forget that moment when we first knew that the motor might stop its revolutions any time. Things looked black then in spite of my hunch that we would get through somehow.

Then the drop into the sea—but I am in Paris now, starting for America. Every one has been wonderful to me in Europe. The people in Paris and France have been extraordinarily kind and I am deeply grateful for their generous welcome to Capt. Haldeman and me.

I am taking back to New York a treasured memory of how wonderful Paris, where I hoped to land in one hop from New York, could be to one American girl.

Unique

THE REV. R. A. ELWOOD

Mr. Elwood, pastor of the Boardwalk Church, Atlantic City, will be the speaker at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow at the East Liberty Y. M. C. A., for the first of a series of six meetings during the year. For almost 20 years, Mr. Elwood has conducted services in a church without an officer, a congregation or a bit of property of its own. His subject will be, "What America Needs."

Grand Opera

Cavalleria Rusticana
I Pagliacci
PITT THEATER

A good audience enjoyed the old combination "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I Pagliacci," sung by the San Carlo Opera Company in the Pitt Theater last night. It seemed as though the two casts were trying to outdo the success of Faust of the previous evening. With the orchestra again on the alert and the chorus enjoying favorite music the performances were bound to be pleasing.

I shall always remember the Turiddu of Tafura for his farewell scene with Mama Lucia. If an audience understands that boy's last moments just before Alfio stabs him, tears are inevitable. Santa Biondo was a new Santuzza and a very convincing singer. Interrante's Alfio always had as much snap as his whip. Lola was sung by Coe Glade and Mama Lucia by Beatrice Altieri.

The star of "Pagliacci" was Myrna Sharlow. How interesting to know that her voice could do the light bird song and that dainty dance music in the play with Canio with so much of the quality we admired in both Mimi and Marguerite. Bertini's Canio was disappointing, not so much in voice as in lack of fervor. Edward Albano had the satisfaction of the ever popular prologue and received much applause, but fortunately no encore.

This afternoon the company will sing Madame Butterfly with a new Japanese prima donna, and will close the engagement tonight with "El Trovatore."

When you must return goods ~ Do it promptly

NO CITY offers more generous return privileges. It is only fair that merchandise for Exchange or Credit be returned at the earliest moment. Remember such articles are temporarily off the market. Nobody else can buy them. Sales may be lost—are lost every day. Other customers are disappointed, capital is tied up and stocks are depleted.

The outside limit for returns is seven days. After that sales are considered final. But don't keep merchandise for seven days merely because you don't have to decide sooner. Send it back as quickly as you can.

Thoughtful selection in the store will reduce "on approval" transactions. Prompt return will lessen an expense that is today out of proportion to sales. Savings inevitably will be reflected in lowered selling prices—(competition will see to that)—and better service will be afforded you.

JONES KILLS TRIP

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 5.—(United News.)—Hopes that a post-season football game between Yale and the University of Southern California might be arranged, have been dispelled by a letter from Tad Jones to his brother, Howard, Trojan coach. The Eli mentor said that Yale would be unable to consider any game on the Pacific Coast.

THROUGH the SPORT LENS

by HAVEY BOYLE

FOOLS rush in where angels fear to tread. Well, I'm no angel. When a man calls up to say that upon my judgment of a highly controversial, interesting and complex situation will rest management decision I am so flattered that I'll risk my neck to make a stab at an answer. The question posed is: "Which team, Pitt or Washington and Jefferson, has the harder schedule this year?"

HAVEY BOYLE

On a day when some 60,000 partisans of these two fine teams meet here to watch their respective favorites in action this certainly is a nice time to attempt to settle a moot point. It is a question which calls for much prayer and fasting before attempting an answer.

HERE are the two schedules: Pitt in turn was slated to meet Thiel, Grove City, West Virginia, Drake, Carnegie Tech, Allegheny, Washington and Jefferson, Nebraska and Penn State. Wash-Jeff was scheduled to meet Waynesburg, Western Maryland, Bethany, Carnegie Tech, Lafayette, Thiel, Pitt, Bucknell and West Virginia. Now which looks the more difficult? Before you read on form your own judgment and then either agree or disagree with which is to follow. Don't do yourself the disservice of allowing this writer to sway you either way and if you are related to either school, directly or remoted, please make proper allowance for that, but don't lean over backwards.

IT seems to me Pitt has on its schedule five games in which the material is generally so strong that none can be regarded as a set-up. These five are West Virginia, Carnegie Tech, Wash-Jeff, Nebraska and Penn State. That would be the judgment at the start of any average year. Wash-Jeff at the start of any average year would look for great trouble from, I believe, five on its card, Carnegie Tech, Lafayette, Pitt, West Virginia and Bucknell.

EACH team had on its card five games in which natural fear of defeat is present. Pitt would be uneasy about West Virginia, Carnegie, Wash-Jeff, Nebraska and State. Wash-Jeff would fear defeat in the games with Carnegie, Lafayette, Pitt, Bucknell and West Virginia.

But I believe that Pitt, owing to more natural rivalry games on that card, faced a harder task at the beginning of the season than Wash-Jeff.

IT is true that Wash-Jeff's weaker games were less weak, by far, than Pitt's weak games, yet it seems here that the difference of weakness between these two groups on each card is not a great factor since in none of them was there any real fear that either Pitt or Wash-Jeff would lose.

IT is a hairline decision, but the client wanted an answer and here it is: Considering all factors, the unexpected strength of Bucknell and the unexpected weakness of Lafayette on the Wash-Jeff card, the unexpected weakness of West Virginia, the Carnegie Tech spirit against Pitt which never arises quite the same against Wash-Jeff, and allowing for the admitted superiority of Wash-Jeff's weak teams over the weak teams played by Pitt the decision is that if I were a coach at the start of the year having the choice of the two schedules I believe I would consider the Wash-Jeff schedule a shade the easier.

NOW before Wash-Jeff followers get ready to throw things let me say in extenuation that I am simply calling it as I see it, that neither institution has any claim on my emotions or prejudices, and that if you put a Pitt man and a Wash-Jeff man in a dark room I would as lief stumble over one as the other.

BROADLY viewed, of course, the hairline decision in Pitt's favor is in a way a great tribute to Wash-Jeff. Why shouldn't a school of Pitt's size and general advantages in athletics have a harder schedule than the Presidents with their relatively small enrollment.

The Pitt answer, of course, would be that perhaps as many football players go to Wash-Jeff as go to Pitt, and that the rest of the field, only the student field that is to say, is larger at Pitt. Even if this is true, and I am not sure it is, the greater student field, allowing for greater enthusiasm, greater inspiration, is a decided advantage.

ONE pleasant phase of a controversy of this kind is that both institutions through many years of great rivalry never have lost a sense of proportion. A few boys on both sides have on occasion run off the reservation, but in the main, Pitt and Wash-Jeff through many years of great gridiron strife have maintained relations of the finest kind.

IN fact this parochial rivalry between two schools of the same section has weathered various storms of feeling far better than, for instance other great rivalries. One immediately, of course, thinks of Princeton and Harvard actually breaking off because they got so worked up about an athletic relationship.

OF course, we in Pittsburgh cannot be too superior about this, either, for once two very great institutions, Pitt and Carnegie, found the feeling so great that an armistice was signed to prevent gridiron meetings until fervent spirits cooled down a little.

PROSPERITY LOSER

NINEVEH, Pa., Nov. 5.—Nineveh High made it six straight yesterday when they defeated the Prosperity High eleven by a score of 39 to 6. The result of the contest was never in doubt, Nineveh flashing a strong offensive at all stages.

"Old Master" Barely Wins

DALLAS, Tex., Nov. 5.—The Old Master, Walter Hagen, fought the greatest fight of his career here yesterday in the semi-finals of the National P. G. A. tourney and won, 1 up, 37 holes.

With his crown rocking and reeling from the brilliant attack unleashed by Al Espinosa, veteran from Chicago, the great "Haig," calm as a war lord in the heat of battle, plugged on and on, and won.

He won after 37 grueling holes of as thrilling, flesh-crawling golf as was ever displayed for a cheering gallery. He won when the steel nerves of the Chicago Spaniard snapped after a sensational uphill battle.

The king of the pros kept his seat on his 3-year-old throne when Espinosa failed on the thirty sixth green—failed to get a half when a half meant victory.

And then on the extra hole, Espinosa's spirit was finally broken. He was weak on a putt, and as a magnificent Indian summer day came to an end, so did the most thrilling golf spectacle ever staged in the Southwest.

Out of the Metropolitan district there has risen a dark threat in the personage of Young Joe Turnesa. The Elmsford, N. Y., Country Club pro has whipped his way through to the finals with an amazing brand of golf. He conquered Gene Sarazen Thursday, and yesterday he defeated John Golden, of Patterson, N. J., 7 and 6.

This dark-skinned lad from the east is given an even shot to take Hagen's dusty crown. Cool nerved and with excellent form, Turnesa may prove the stumbling block in the march of Sir Walter to another P. G. A. championship. But Hagen, the old master that he is, likely will find a way.

SPORT COMMENT

tunately ended in a dispute over a decision by the referee.

With the score 4 to 0 in their favor, the W. & J. players left the field, and, the game was awarded to Wooster by default.

THE first W. & J. squad in 1890, in striking contrast to the big band brought here for today's game, totaled only 13 men, apart from Coach Lynch.

They were Capt. Blaney, Gillette, Johnson, Diehl, Bell, Tupper, Bruce, McKee, Myers, Hines, Hutchinson, Rehn and Clark.

In addition to serving as captain, Blaney divided the duties of manager with Gillette, one of the other players, whereas today there is a graduate manager, a student manager and a flock of assistant managers whose duties are wholly in connection with the business end of the sport.

In 1891 the schedule was increased to six games, in 1894 it dropped back to four, for 1893, 1894 and 1895 it was boosted to eight, and in 1896 for the first time it was drawn out to the number of contests now played annually—nine.

WHEN a sufficient number of college teams could not be booked, games were arranged with athletic clubs and Y. M. C. A. teams to fill out the schedule.

From 1896 to 1900, inclusive, W. & J.'s meeting with the D. C. & A. C. professionals of this city was the feature game of Thanksgiving Day in these parts. In 1901 the Homestead professional all-stars took D. C. & A. C.'s place on W. & J.'s schedule here on Turkey Day, and in 1902 the East End A. A., of this city, was played in the final game.

Since 1902 the Red and Black has confined its schedule to college teams.

From that modest beginning 37 years ago against the same team encountered today in what has become a classic the rise of W. & J. to the highest zones of American football fame forms one of the most remarkable chapters in the history of the great college sport.

PITT-W. & J.

glorious Golden Panthers of Pitt, directed by the reticent Scot, Jock Sutherland, for the highest gridiron honors in the East.

It is unfortunate that today's classic is to be marred by cold and rain and a sloppy, sticky gridiron. Last night's rain and the consistent drizzle that greeted the morning has turned the stadium grid into a treacherous one, and one that is sure to cramp the style of both elevens.

The inclement weather, however, has failed to dampen the ardor of 60,000 followers of college football, who are storming the gates of the city from all points of the compass. The influx of out-of-town visitors began with the arrival of several hundred fans from Oil City and Franklin early this morning.

Today's game will mark the twenty-eighth annual renewal of the great Pitt-W-J feud. Thirteen times, W-J elevens have marched off the field victorious. And 12 times the snarling Panther of Pitt has emerged from grueling battle with the red and black tufts of W. & J. hide in his teeth. Last year, on a day much like today, cold and rainy, they battled to a very uninteresting tie.

HEAR THAT SONG

Listen—you can hear that vociferously sung battle cry of W.-J.

"Oh, W.-J. was W.-J.
"When Pitt was only WUP
"Oh, W.-J. was W.-J.;
When Pitt is gobbled up."

It's the song that has been ringing up and down the city streets since early morning, since those gambollers from Little Washington and "the oldest college from the Alleghenies west" first arrived in town. And it's the same song you'll hear as you seek your downy couch tonight—win or lose.

The Pitt officials were expecting a sell-out, and a crowd that would surpass in number the 58,000 that watched the humbling of old Carnegie a week or so ago. The rain and cold, however, will probably serve to keep the attendance down to some extent, but still, with so much at stake and with such powerful and colorful elevens on the field, a crowd of 60,000 will come as no surprise.

There is little to choose between the two teams today. Pitt can do everything W.-J. can do, and do it equally well. Pitt has a fine eleven, one of the fastest and best coached in the country, builded around a great back, Capt. Welch. There is power and speed on the line, and there are deceptive formations and battering force to be used in the backfield. Topping it all off, there's a defensive strength that so far has only been punctured once this year.

OLD BILL LEADS

W.-J. has a team built on much the same lines as Pitt. Kerr has taken the venerable Bill Amos, Old Bill himself, and around him, constructed a gridiron machine of sterling worth. The line, heavy and fairly fast, lacks some of the experience and polish of the Panther forward wall, but it is a pretty strong weapon. The backfield, with Kirkman, Cook and Helsel supporting Amos, is a thing of beauty and a wonder to behold.

The defensive powers of the Presidents are not as strong as those of Pitt. Twice W. & J. has been scored on this year, and have had many more serious threats within the 10-yard line than have the Panthers.

W.-J., in the 1927 cruise, has defeated Carnegie Tech, Lafayette, Western Maryland, Thiel and Waynesburg. The Presidents were hard pressed by Western Maryland and given a stubborn battle by both Tech and Lafayette.

The Panthers have ripped through West Virginia, Drake, Carnegie Tech, Thiel, Grove City and Allegheny, and have rolled up a total of 228 points to the 126 of W.-J. Tech alone was able to score, blocking a kick and rushing a touchdown over shortly after.

Pitt is outweighed almost to the man. But the Panthers are as fast in the backfield as the Presidents, are faster on the line. Bill Kern, Andy Cutler and Joe Donchess, towers of strength in the Pitt wall, are the hardest hitting, fiercest tackling linemen in the district.

It is going to be a battle of the lines. The wet field, with the possibility of its becoming one of those "seas of mud" of which you read about so often in connection with football yarns, is going to slow up the attacks considerable. It will make line plunging tough, and this will hurt Pitt most, for the Panthers are much better supplied with line buckers than are the Presidents. Booth and Parkinson are as good line wreckers as can be found.

PITT CRIPPLED.

Pitt is crippled to the extent that both regular quarterbacks are out of the fray and that Booth is hardly a starting possibility. But the reserve material, Salata at quarter, Parkinson at full, is strong and well able to handle the situation. Especially in the case of Parkinson, who may prove to be the hero of the game.

On the line, watch the work of this fellow Bill Kern, Pitt's big left tackle. He is rated by his coaches as being the equal of most any of Pitt's great list of tackles. Fast, heady and staunch on the defense, he will be the backbone of Pitt's line.

And keep an eye on Nick Herrold, W.-J.'s end, and on Carl Aschman, the new Red and Black center, who's play so far has been extraordinarily good. Aschman is a cool and wise head, an accurate passer and a keen diagnostician on the defense.

W.-J.'s great peril is going to come from the savage off-tackle thrusts of Welch, the line plunging of either Parkinson or Booth, and the deceptive, well-conceived and expertly carried out Pitt aerial attack. So far, W. & J. has not shown any too keen forward passing defense, which may prove its downfall today.

W. & J. has fast runnings backs in Cook and Kirkman for off tackle and short end run play, and has Amos to rip and tear at the line, which he usually does with great gusto.

As is usually the case when Pitt and W. & J. meet, the odds in the betting favor Pitt. There isn't much wagering on this game, but the boys are asking for 10-9 and 10-8 and are also willing to lay it on the line if given seven points, with Pitt picked to win.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Those British fighters continue to prefer a horizontal position to a vertical one.

Knute Hansen, the hard-hitting Dane, knocked out Phil Scott, the visiting English fireman, in the first round of their scheduled 10-round bout at the Madison Square Garden last night.

The Briton never had a chance.

As the first and last round opened, Scott missed with a left and then they went into close quarters and exchanged rights to the body.

Then they swapped rights to the mid-section. Hansen smashed a right to the jaw and Phil went to the floor. The Englishman refused to take a long count, and got up when the referee had counted three.

Knute then proceeded to send Scott to a horizontal position again with a hard right to the body and then knocked him out completely with a terrific right to the jaw.

Jack Dempsey, who witnessed the fight, was introduced from the ring and received an ovation.

Dundee Is Out on Bail

Advertising Fraud Charge

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 5.—Joe Dundee, welterweight champion, and Max Waxman, his manager, were released from the city jail on bail of $1,000 each, following their arrest aboard an eastbound train at Pasadena early last night.

The fighter and his manager were bound for Chicago when arrested by detectives on warrants charging false advertising in connection with the Dundee-Hudkins fight fiasco at Wrigley Field last night.

Dick Donald, promoter of the show, against whom a warrant was also issued, was still being sought by the police late last night.

Ferris R. Miller, manager of the Better Business Bureau, swore to the complaints after a conference with City Prosecutor E. J. Lickley and his deputies. "It is the contention of the bureau that there never was any intention on the part of these three men to hold the fight as promised through their advertising," Miller said.

While this move was on the members of the State Athletic Commission held a hurried meeting in secret, passing the buck hither and yon and finally dumped the mess into the lap of the local representative, Seth W. P. Strelinger, with the moral support and best wishes of the other two members—Charles Traunt, of San Francisco, and Louis Almgren, of San Diego.

While the pot was boiling, Al Hoffman, San Francisco promoter, wired Waxman an offer of $60,000 for Dundee to fight Hudkins in San Francisco for the title.

"Get the dough on the line and we will fight in three days," Waxman said. However, the commission's sanction will be necessary.

CARDINALS' CHIEFS FOR BILL AS PILOT

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

PRIVATE advices received in this city today relative to the St. Louis National League managerial situation indicate that the earlier report naming Bill McKechnie as successor to Bob O'Farrell is true.

McKechnie is known to be favored over all others by Messrs. Breadon and Rickey, the two Redbird officials with authority to act. The two big bosses have a fondness for McKechnie personally and they like his baseball ideas.

Breadon is of the opinion that managers are easier to land than star players who sway flags. Moreover, he thinks that a great performer like O'Farrell is handicapped by the managerial role and apparently he would free the receiver of the burden in order that he could function better as a player. There was fine harmony between O'Farrell and McKechnie last season.

Bill is due to return from his hunting trip in time to attend the Pitt-Wash. Jeff. grid battle this afternoon.

SPORT COMMENT

by JAMES J. LONG

THOUGH aware that Pitt and Wash-Jeff met in football no fewer than 27 times prior to today, and that this particular annual game is one of the oldest local features in any branch of college sports, many of the present-day fans may not know that W. & J.'s football history had its actual beginning in a contest with the Blue and Gold.

In other words, it was against the same opponent faced today that the athletes representing the college in "Little Washington" played the first game of football in which they ever participated.

UNIVERSITY OF PITTSBURGH, then known as Western University of Pennsylvania, was the opposing team in the game that opened the Red and Black's football history. That event took place 37 years ago, or on November 1, 1890.

Pitt, or Wup, rather, had broken into football several years earlier, and therefore had the advantage of a slightly longer experience at the game, but that did not prevent the Washington beginners from sweeping on to a convincing victory and piling up the big total of 34 points while the local eleven was held scoreless.

THAT marked the entry of W. & J. into football. As Dr. Frederick H. Blaney, who was captain of the first Red and Black team, related it, a few of the W. & J. College students, who desired to learn the collegiate game and to establish relations with other colleges in the sport, "got together" in the fall of 1889, obtained the necessary equipment for playing football and undertook to teach themselves the rudiments of the game.

He said that in spite of difficulties the boys acquired some knowledge of the game and found the nucleus for a team for the following season.

In the fall of 1890 came the real beginning. The first step was the signing of a coach, and for this position Wash-Jeff signed Prof. Lynch of Trinity Hall and a graduate of old Trinity College, a man who loved the game, knew its strategic possibilities and who was himself a splendid quarterback.

LYNCH'S skilled coaching, according to the recollections of Dr. Blaney, caused the awkward squad to improve rapidly, and in spite of numerous handicaps—such as the lack of a gymnasium, scrub team, shower baths, etc., he succeeded in whipping into shape a team that on November 1, in W. & J.'s first appearance in a football contest and the first staging of what has since developed into the big classic given its annual renewal here this afternoon, defeated Western University of Pennsylvania 34 to 0, as stated above.

Only three games were played by W. & J. during that first season, and this city figured in all of them.

One week after the conquest of the "Wups" W. & J. defeated the East End Athletic Club of Pittsburgh, then one of the leading and most popular athletic organizations in this part of the country, by a score of 10 to 0 after a hard game.

ACCORDING to Dr. Blaney's chronicles, these two victories in the first games ever played by the college, aroused a great deal of interest, and college spirit was rampant when, on November 29, in Pittsburgh, the original "Presidents" before what was then considered a large crowd, but which was only a mere handful in comparison with the huge turnout of today, the Red and Black met Wooster (O.) University in the third and final game of the season.

After Wash-Jeff had made one touchdown, which counted for four points at that time, and was within striking distance of Wooster's goal line a second time, the game unfor-

Dukes Set For Fray Today

THE Duquesne University football varsity left town early this morning for Johnstown, Pa., where it will take the field here today against St. Francis College in the Municipal Stadium with high hopes of annexing its third consecutive triumph, a feat that has not been accomplished by Duquesne for quite a number of years.

The Dukes have been drilled long and hard for this game by Coaches Layden and Weibel, former Notre Dame luminaries. An aerial attack that was good enough to down both Thiel and Westminster will be used against the Loretto gridders today, and with the squad in good physical trim, Head Coach Layden is confident of getting away with a decision victory.

St. Francis, light but hard hitting, will place its main reliance in a sturdy defense, one that was good enough to hold both Bethany and Westminster in check while 3-0 triumphs were scored.

Layden made a last minute change in his plans, and instead of leading his Dukes out of town last night, kept them here and started on the journey early this morning.

St. Francis will be out to win, in an effort to make it two in a row over the Dukes. The team has been especially drilled in a defense against the Duquesne aerial game.

SHUFFLE IS SHUFFLED

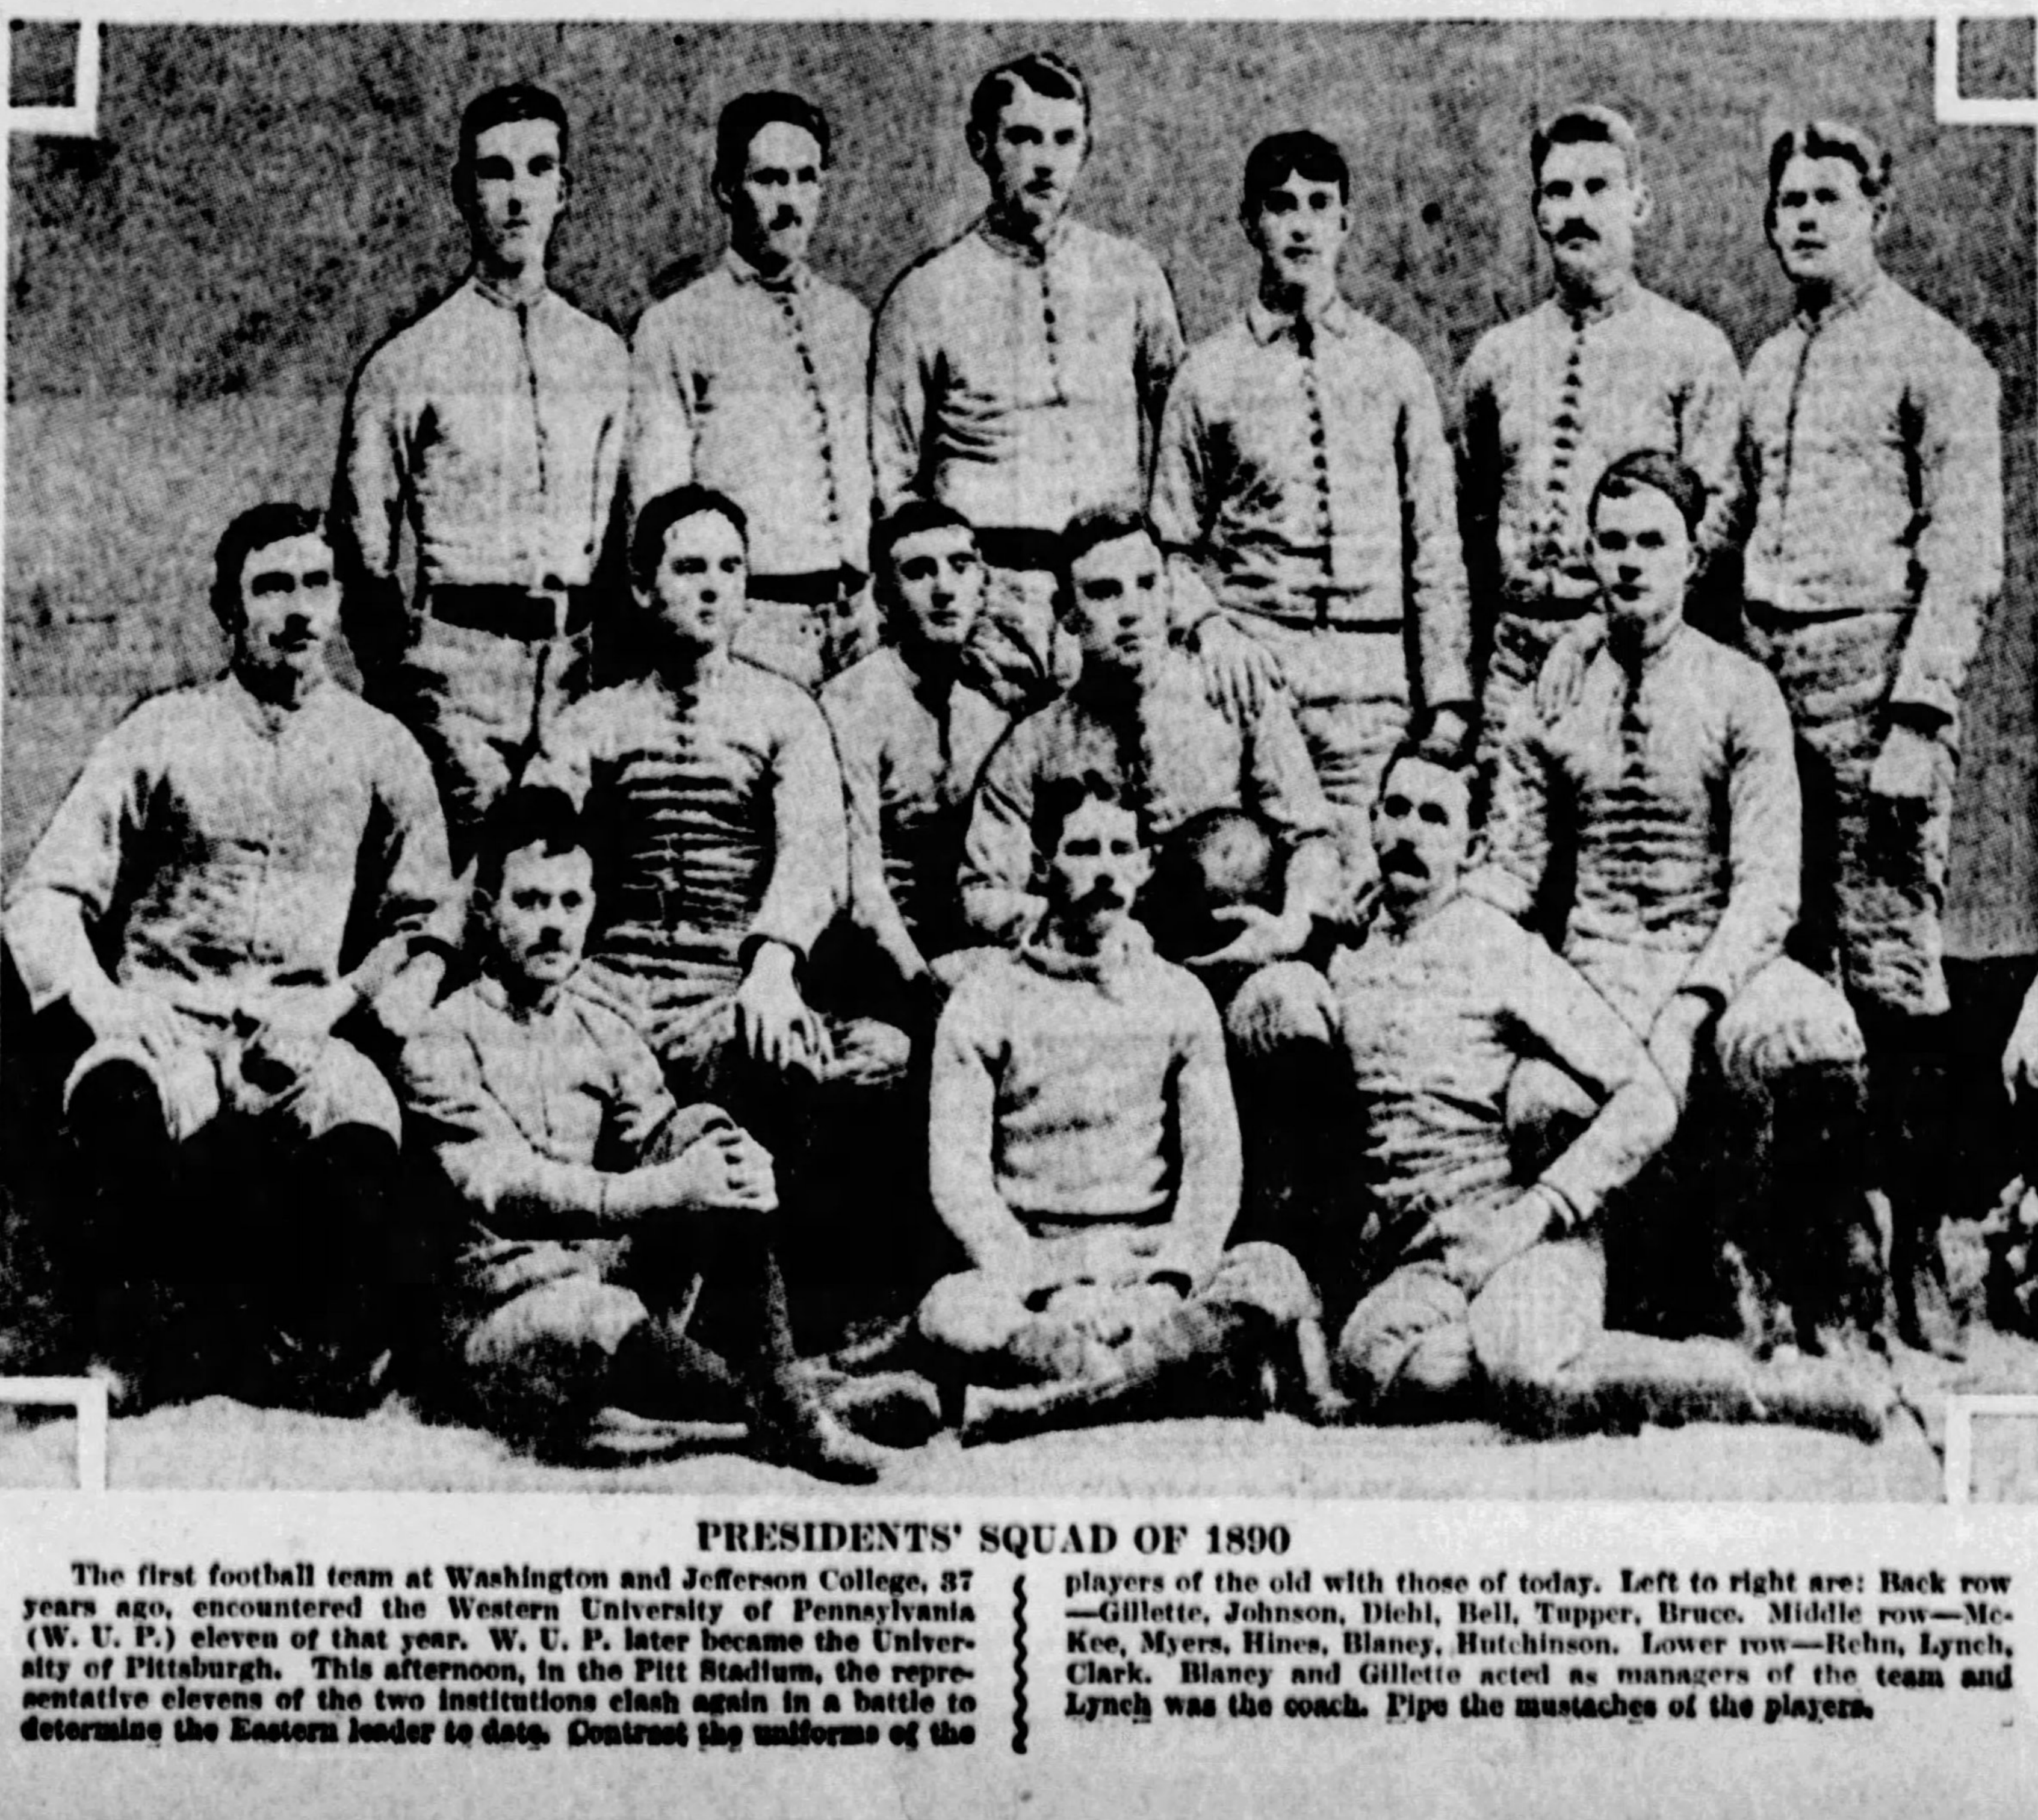
JACKETS ARE READY FOR U. P. ENCOUNTER

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Nov. 5.—The football game to be played here between the Waynesburg and Westminster College elevens today, will bring together two teams coached in widely different styles of play.

The Westminster team is coached by Dwight Beede, former Carnegie Tech star, who has imparted the Steffen system to his charges, while Waynesburg is coached by Kate Easterday, former Pitt star, who uses the famous Pop Warner system.

The fact that Westminster will play according to the system taught by Steffen insures plenty of action in the game.

W. & J.'s FIRST TEAM TO FACE PITT



PRESIDENTS' SQUAD OF 1890

The first football team at Washington and Jefferson College, 37 years ago, encountered the Western University of Pennsylvania (W. U. P.) eleven of that year. W. U. P. later became the University of Pittsburgh. This afternoon, in the Pitt Stadium, the representative elevens of the two institutions clash again in a battle to determine the Eastern leader to date. Contrast the uniforms of the players of the old with those of today. Left to right are: Back row—Gillette, Johnson, Diehl, Bell, Tupper, Bruce. Middle row—McKee, Myers, Hines, Blaney, Hutchinson. Lower row—Rehn, Lynch, Clark. Blaney and Gillette acted as managers of the team and Lynch was the coach. Pipe the mustaches of the players.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

by HARRY KECK

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS EDITOR

MEMBERS of the Carnegie Tech football team are unable to agree on the winner of today's classic, or, as the overseas soccerites would call it, "derby," between Pitt and Wash-Jeff. Tech has played both teams, and therefore the opinions of its players should carry some weight.

Purl Anderson, captain and guard of the Tartans, figures Pitt is one touchdown better than the Presidents and thinks a 14-7 score would not be a bad guess. He looks for Pitt's passing attack to be the deciding factor.

Tech lost to W. & J., 19-6, and, a week later, to Pitt, 23-7.

JOHN ENGLISH, Tech end, also thinks Pitt is about one touchdown stronger than the Little Washington outfit. Gibby Welch, he says, is faster than any player in the W. & J. backfield, but Amos is a rugged player and a great linebreaker. It is anybody's game, with the edge pointing the Panthers' way, is the way he dopes out the battle.

Lovewell, one of the Tech tackles, shares the views of Anderson and English. He says Pitt has better reserve material and that its ends rank with the best and warns the Panthers to be aware of Aschman, the peppery center of the Presidents. He looks for about a 13-6 score, with Pitt on the long end.

The dissenting vote comes from Paul Cooper, the other Tech tackle. He thinks W. & J. is one touchdown better than Pitt. "Wash-Jeff has a better line and tell Welch to be sure to keep his interference in front of him or it will be just too bad," is his sum-up, and he adds that Wash-Jeff's backfield as a whole is a better one than Pitt's.

DAVE BEHRHORST, captain of the Allegheny College team, which played Pitt last Saturday, has a high opinion of the Panthers. He believes Pitt could defeat Dartmouth by at least a 14-6 margin and his opinion is based on how his own eleven fared against both teams. The Methodists lost, 38-6, to the Big Green and 52-0 to Pitt, which started and finished with a makeshift lineup. Behrhorst, who prepared at Avalon High School, says Pitt's running attack and interference are better than Dartmouth's, although Dartmouth's backs are faster. Pitt's aerial game also is better and its line play would prove too strong for the Hanoverians. Comparing Gibby Welch with Myles Lane, the Dartmouth backfield star, Behrhorst said Gibby is just as fast as Lane and a shiftier runner.

MAX WAXMAN, manager of Joe Dundee, did the right thing when he refused to let the welterweight champion enter the ring against Ace Hudkins at Los Angeles Tuesday night unless Dundee's guarantee was forthcoming before the bout. Some time ago, before Dundee won the title, Max took him to San Francisco for a guarantee of $7,500 to box Eddie Roberts, and got the "works." Dundee was dropped by a hard right to the chin before he could get warmed up in the first round, arose at the count of nine and was trying to weather the storm when the referee stopped the bout with five seconds to go before the bell which would have given him a respite. That fight nearly ruined his championship prospects. He had to fight Roberts again in New York and win before he could get the titular shot with Pete Latzo, and meanwhile rival managers were giving Waxman the horse laugh for having got into the jam. Max said they'd pay him well before he'd return to the coast for a bout, and Promoter Dick Donald had to make a couple of trips East to land Dundee for the Hudkins match.

WHILE in Chicago for the Dempsey-Tunney fight recently, Waxman showed me the contract with Donald calling for $65,000, and not $60,000, as reports from California state. He said he would get the money in advance or there would be no fight. The handwriting on the wall was apparent last week when Donald postponed the show because of a "rainy spell." The real reason was a weak advance sale of tickets.

It was noised about plentifully that if Dundee got his money he wouldn't escape with his title unless he knocked out Hudkins. The boxing commission claims it knew nothing of the agreement whereby the promoter guaranteed Dundee a flat sum, but everybody else seemed to know of the contract. In view of the involved situation, and his previous experience in the Native Son state, it is difficult to see how anyone can condemn Waxman for protecting his champion. Titles do not grow on trees and are not won every night in the week. If Waxman had been nailed as a sucker a second time it would have been his own fault.

SHADY SIDERS IN LEAGUE CLASH

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER

The first game in the Interstate Preparatory School League heads the lists of contests for today in scholastic circles for this district. The Nichols School of Buffalo faces Shady Side Academy on the gridiron, soggy, wet and muddy as it might be, at Aspinwall. The teams are primed for the fray and it is anticipated a good game will ensue, despite the inclement weather of the last few days, which have made football a messy affair.

In other games Swissvale takes a jaunt up to New Castle; Youngwood visits Norwin, which "crowned" Washington last week, and William Penn High of Harrisburg invades Greensburg. The Donora-Jeannette tilt should be a real tilt. Etna travels to Evans City. Turtle Creek Union shows at Latrobe.

Nothing particularly unusual occurred in yesterday's contests. Oliver High wiped another opponent off the board for the Section II City League championship when it tripped Perry 12-0. Allegheny, its lone barrier to the title, showed a little strength by downing Langley, 20-0.

Schenley showed its superiority over Peabody in Section I by coming through with a 19-6 win, which just about shows the margin of difference between the teams.

Homestead's victory over Braddock, 6-0, wasn't just exactly expected, although the game was so close either team might have won. Dormont set down Carnegie, 13-0; Edgewood shut out Sharpsburg, 20-0; St. Mary's eked out a 6-0 win over Sacred Heart; Sewickley was whitewashed by Avalon, 20-0; Pitcairn set back Arnold, 26-0; South Hills barely beat Carrick, 2-0, and Oakmont won over Arnold Prep, 31-7.

SANDE BANNED FOR FOULING

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 5.—(AP.)—Reigh Count would have won the Futurity—Pimlico's fall classic, his backers contend, if Earl Sande, riding Bateau, had not forced him against the rail.

Reigh Count and Bateau were leading at the home stretch when William Doyle, a patrol judge, alleged Sande "deliberately cut in front of Reigh Count, forcing him to the fence and ruining his stride."

Reigh Count was the favorite, and nerves of the 30,000 spectators were tense when they saw the shuffling of the mounts at the last stretch and the dash of Glade to victory.

Charged with fouling, Sande was suspended from further races at Pimlico this season and ejected from the grounds. The Maryland Racing Commission, which has the authority to revoke his license as a jockey, will consider his case today.

The noted jockey, who has won thousands for his employers, denied he fouled Reigh Count or Chick Lang, his rider. Amid tears he claimed his mount swerved against Reigh Count when Lang, he said, tugged at his blouse.

Bateau was in the lead up to the home stretch when Reigh Count swept beside him. Boyle declared Sande tried twice to elbow Reigh Count into the rail and then "deliberately cut in front of him."

CARNEGIE

as did Colgate last week, and certain that it would give Meehan's Gothamites a long and hard afternoon.

The Violets rule favorites over Tech, and are picked to win by a touchdown or two, though Meehan and his assistants realize the task that confronts them in conquering the eleven that downed Notre Dame last fall.

An estimated crowd of close to 40,000 is expected to witness the game today. Meehan's undefeated Violet combination will undoubtedly enter the fray a favorite over the Pittsburgh eleven, but whatever margin it will be very slight.

Although Carnegie has suffered two defeats this year, one coming at the hands of the University of Pittsburgh and the other by Washington and Jefferson, the Tech gridders performed remarkably well in each contest, giving both undefeated elevens a terrific battle in each instance.

The Tartans last year held the Violets without a touchdown, losing on two goals from the field.

Kousman, substitute end, may start and will be paired with English at the terminal posts. Kousman showed well against the Mountaineers after replacing Sweet.

Meehan was undecided on his lineup for today, although it is certain that Al Lassman, giant tackle, will not start due to a leg injury in the Colgate contest. Bils, another capable lineman, will replace Lassman.

Love Tests That May Be Trusted

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"DO you love me?"

Has not this question echoed in every heart at some high moment of life?

When uttered with sincerity it is the cry of love seeking responsive love. The human heart, timid and doubtful, wants reassurance, can hardly believe in the beauty and glory and joy of love, searches for proof, for a test.

"How can I be sure he loves me?" asks Betty and Jane, Sue and Vivian, in their letters.

"How can I be sure of my own love?" is the problem of Anne and Ida and Florence.

Even as all that glitters is not gold, the glamor and lure of physical attraction is often mistaken for true affection, which is a safe foundation for marriage.

Various tests of love have been tried with varying success.

Most of us remember the ballad of the lovely lady who threw her glove into a den of lions and bade her knight fetch it to her as a test of his love. Surely, that lady was fitly repaid when the knight, fighting off ravenous beasts, rescued her glove, returned it to her, rode away and never returned. Her test had killed his love by needless cruelty.

That is the trouble with many tests of love. Instead of testing, they disgust and kill affection. Jealousy has been called proof of love. It might more truly be called love's grave. For jealousy is destructive, and just to the extent that it sways the heart it tears down kindly, sympathetic, understanding love.

There are, however, ways of testing love. And it is well to take time to be very sure before entrusting your life into another's keeping, that your love for him and his for you is real and has a fair chance of growing with the years.

Do you honestly find happiness in helping the man you are interested in to get what he wants? Do you feel that you care so much for him that you will enjoy helping him unselfishly when you and he are married, and the glamor of courtship has given way to the practical problems of home life?

Alice and Dick were so devoted to each other during the days of their engagement that their friends were inclined to smile at their ardor. Other marriages might fail—theirs could not, they were positive. Their love was different. Their betrothal was a round of gaieties, theaters, dancing, parties. Then they were married and Dick settled more to the strenuous task of making a living, while Alice busied herself with housekeeping for two.

"He's just plain contrary!" complained Alice the other day. "When he comes home at night, all he wants is his newspaper, easy chair and pipe.

"It never occurs to him that I have been shut up all day and would like a little fun and change in the evening. If I suggest a theater or a dance, he tells me he is worn out with his work and can't keep late hours."

Love that is to last and prove trustworthy, is more than emotional hysteria and fascination. It calls for willingness and ability to plan for another's comfort, welfare and happiness. And that means headwork.

Housework is monotonous. Alice naturally needs a change and good time. But she has afternoons. Why does she not manage to join some group of young women who play bridge or Mah-Jong one afternoon each week? Or if she prefers, a mid-week matinee might be arranged with a young woman she numbers among her friends. She could easily manage to devote one afternoon each week to a pleasure jaunt and return with a fresh viewpoint and an interesting account of her good time. This report might fire Dick with ambition to invite her to go with him to the theater on a Saturday evening, or to join with her in inviting a few friends in now and then for a pleasant party.

Where there's love there's a way of taking happiness in helping the other to get what he loves. Where this ambition is lacking, you may well be warned against marriage, for love is lacking.

A second test of love is willingness to let the one you love develop his individuality his own way, not yours. The idea that two persons are merged into one by marriage is an exploded theory. But there are still husbands—and also, wives—who congratulate themselves in effect: "Marriage has made the two of us one—and I am that one!"

If you count on changing the man who interests you, if you plan to make him over after you marry him, to break him of faults, and his friendships, reform his tastes and likes and dislikes, better break yourself of the ugly desire to domineer, for it will wreck any marriage. It is well, also, to make quite sure that the man who wishes to marry you does not show the tendency to dominate you and mold you to his selfish will.

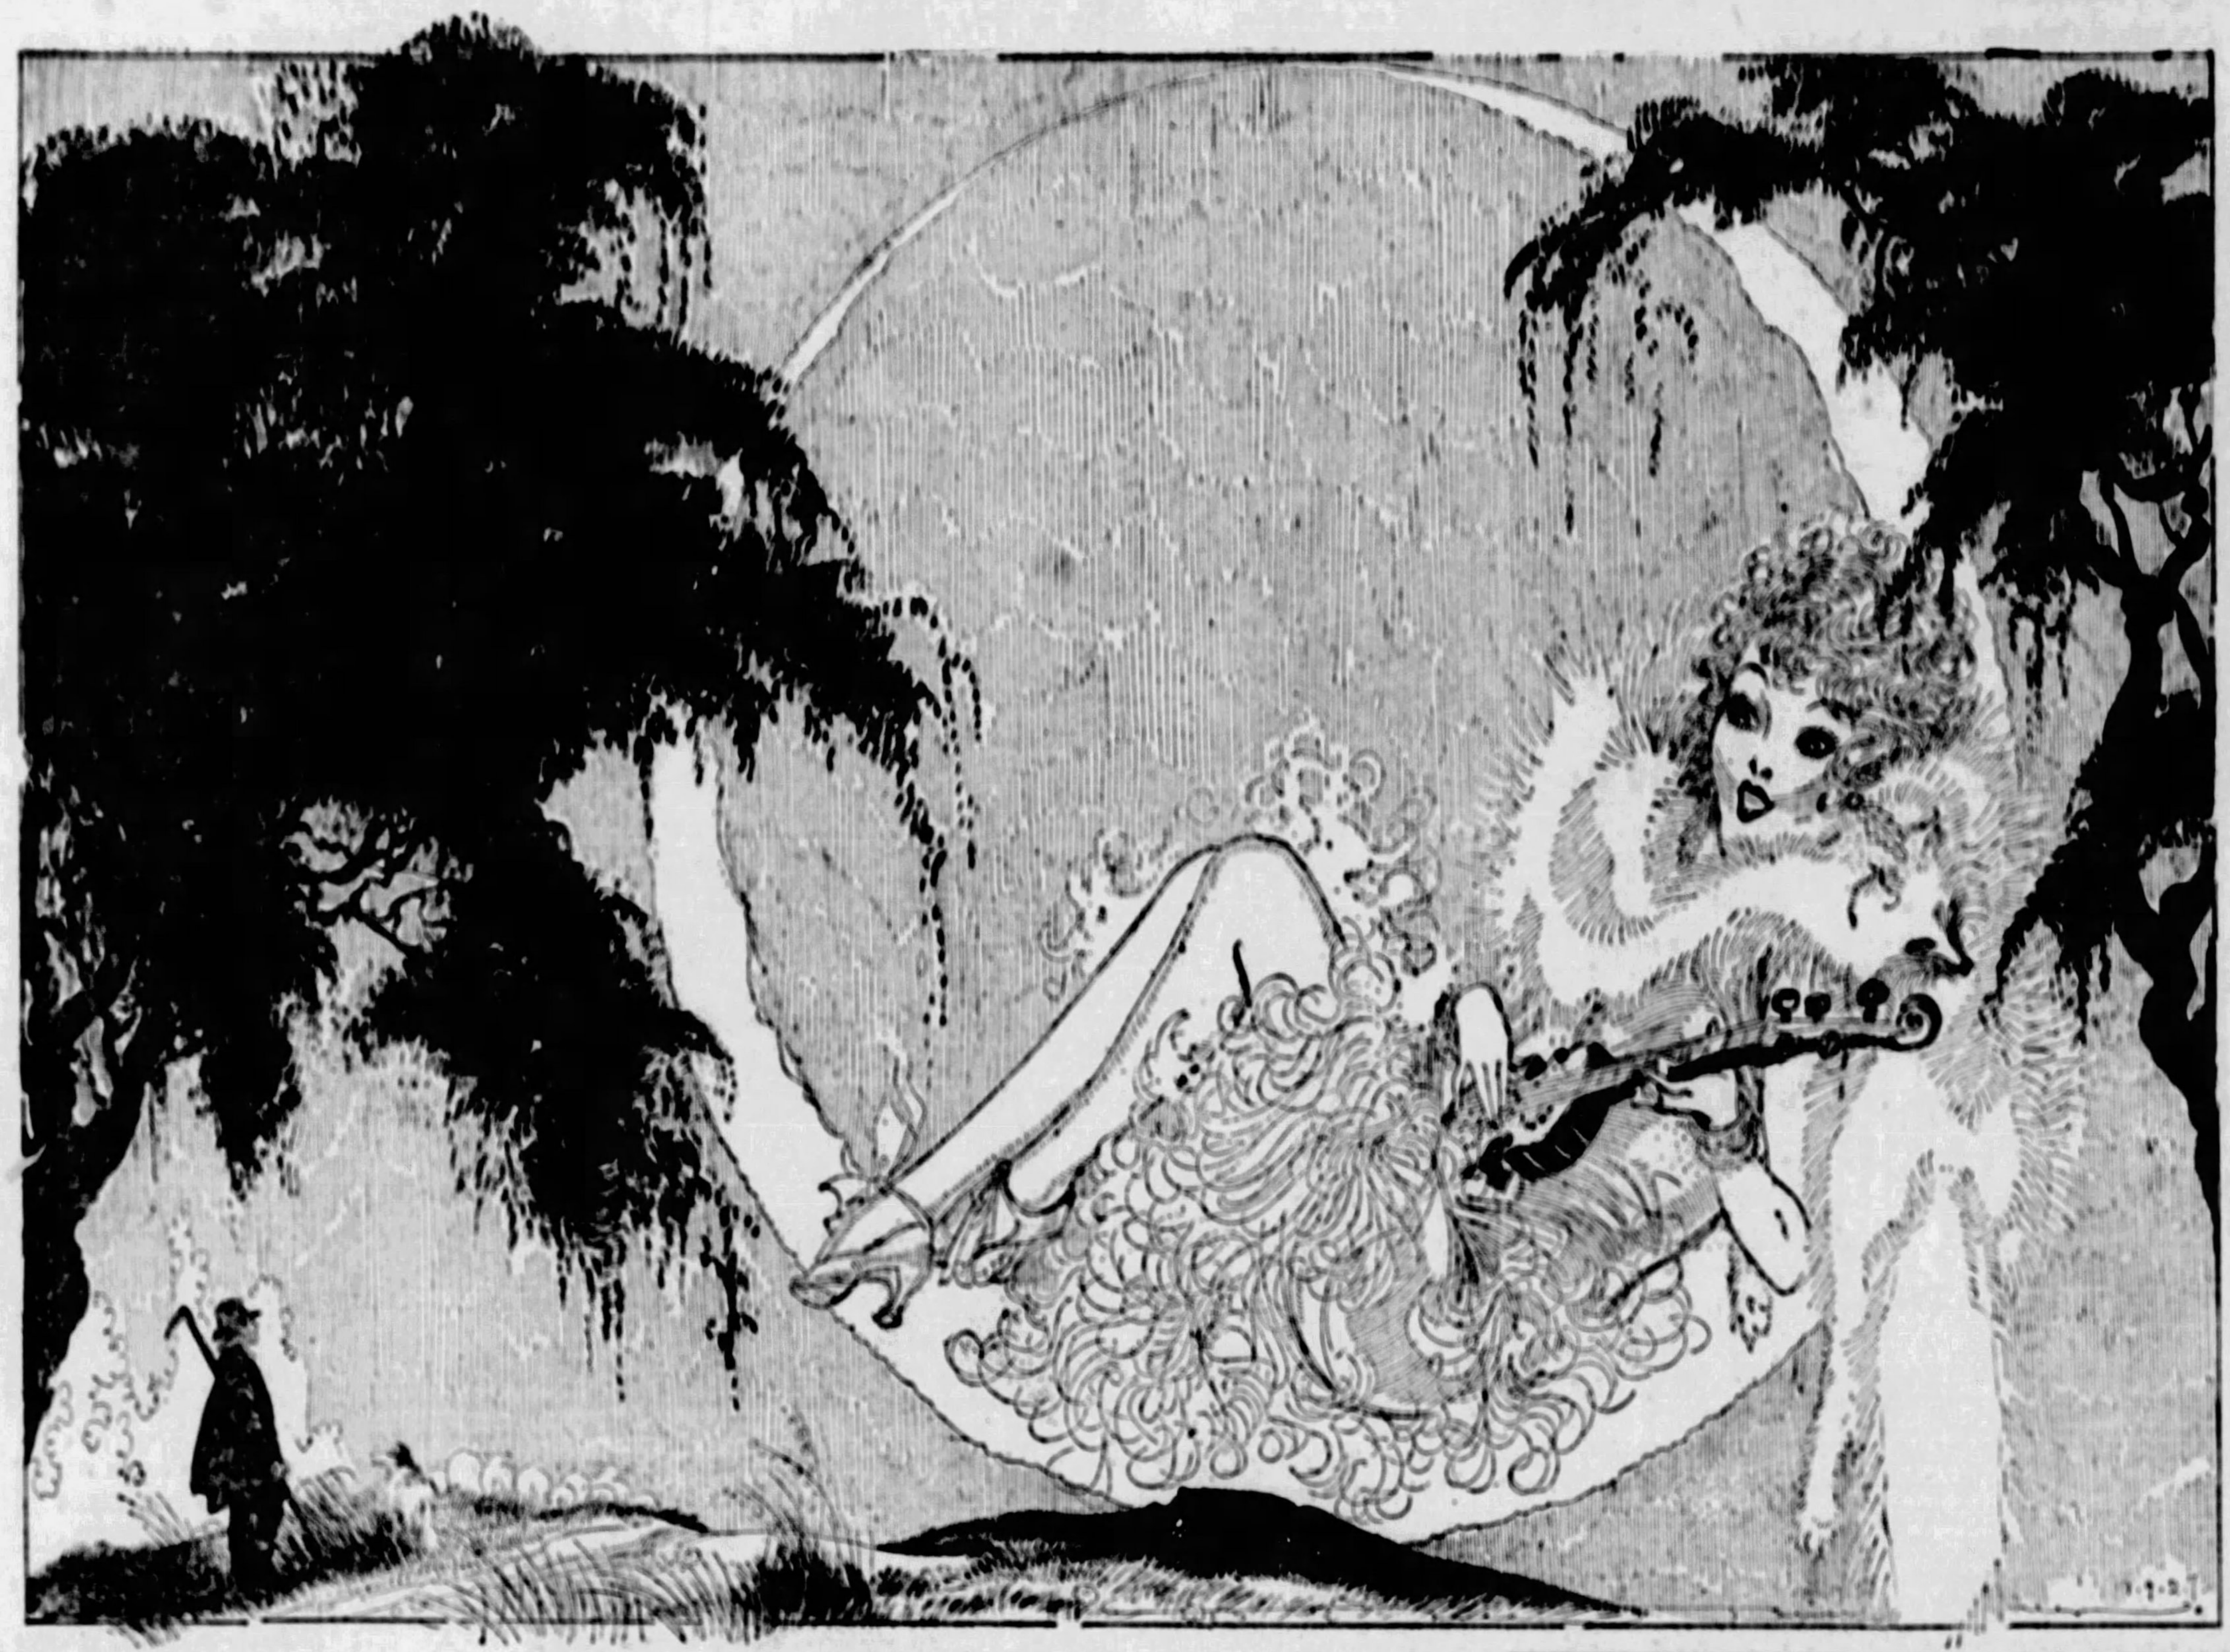
For Sports Costumes

Joining the navy and seeing the world, seems to translate itself into seeing the world of sports fashions, as nautical insignia are the chosen motifs for decorating sports costumes. A tiny star and chevron on the sleeve, or a large star and anchor on the side or front of the blouse of a wool angora frock is smart.

"THE LADY IN THE MOON"

Drawn by
Nell Brinkley



THERE is an old song, "Who is Sylvia—what is she?" You might sing that through ages, to the Moon. She, they say, is a lady. Only some girls in love, say, "the Man in the Moon." And some girls in love do not think of the moon at all save as a source of a mysterious, luminous, enchanting wine of light. Liquid silver that goes to your head. Romance visible in the form of radiance.

But the poets, lovers made poets by sentiment, they say the moon is a woman. They call her cold. A pale enchantress, made of fire, but unwarmed. Enchanting, but chill. Her sign sat shining on the forehead of Diana—the chaste Goddess, who kindled love—but would have none of it.

The young man and his "girl" find her a dream of beauty to light a garden-path and silver the red-black of roses that line it. The animal in the forest lifts his nose to her serene face and barks or howls, sensing her strangeness. The traveler is glad of her brightness on the highroad.

The man in the city sees her peering over the black shoulder of a Babylonish building, and sighs for the country. And in his turn perhaps the lonely ones of the earth, far from our life and our cities, see over the dark shoulder of a hill the silver crescent rising, and find the lady in the moon Siren only, a woman gayly beautiful, a young thing of music and glitter, shedding tempting light, shining calling eyes at him, singing the song called "Come Away—Come Away."

"The same moon," ponders the lonely one, "that is shining on the city, too!" She makes him think of that.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Pimples and Dandruff May Be Discouraged by Care

DR. COPELAND

NOT long ago I told you a good deal about the skin and its functions. In that article the two kinds of glands were described. First, the sweat glands, which pour out the perspiration were mentioned, then the uses of the oil glands, grease glands, sebaceous glands — I don't care what name you give them—were explained.

The skin would lose its elasticity if it were not for the oil glands. It would dry up and crack without them. It would no longer be waterproof.

Likewise, the hair would be dry and harsh without oil. It would become brittle and break off without grease. At the root of each hair of the body is a tiny gland to supply this oil.

Some folks seem actually to ooze oil. Their noses are shiny and greasy. When you shake hands with them the skin feels as if coated with butter.

Young people are inclined to have pimples, a condition called "acne." It seems to be a time of life when the sebaceous glands are very active. Unless there is free escape of the secretion it dams up in the duct, becomes dirty from the sooty air and makes what we call a "blackhead." The skin of the face may be peppered with these disfiguring defects.

If this mass, which is sure to produce irritation of the skin, becomes infected, there is a pus-filled pimple. In brief, this is what happens in acne.

The same activity met in the glands of the skin will be found in the oil glands of the scalp. Consequently an excessive quantity of this greasy secretion will ooze out on the skin of the head. When it dies, it brushes off or falls off in the familiar white flakes, a condition we call "dandruff."

Of course there may be and probably are, other factors having to do with its cause. But this is one important feature.

Sometimes there are patches of the scalp where there is much more dandruff production than elsewhere. In this case there will be moisture of the skin in that region and perhaps great itching.

I am firmly of the opinion that persons inclined to dandruff should reduce the intake of cream, butter, cheese, fried foods, thick gravies, fat meat and all foods which are rich in fat. They do not need so much fat and should avoid it as much as possible.

Frequent washing of the hair with an abundance of water and good soap is very desirable. Use a generous quantity of soap suds; rinse these out and apply more soap. Give the hair two or three washings and rinsings this way. Then wash out all the soap with a large amount of clean water. Dry the hair and comb it into place.

Avoid the use of hair brushes. Use a coarse comb only and do not fuss with the hair. Everything you do to it stimulates the oil glands and makes more trouble.

Such shampoos should be made by a man two or three times a week. A woman with long hair should wash it at least once a week.

There are local remedies which seem to help. But the main thing is proper dieting and perfect cleanliness of the scalp.

IT NEVER PAYS

A GRIPPING STORY OF MARGIE—WHO TRIED TO TRICK LOVE

By Gilbert Rogers

Margie Furnishes Shevlin With Dangerous Fuel, Involving Martin.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Margie Marsh comes to New York with a thousand dollars and a wonderful education. She keeps house with four other girls, learns stenography and decides after three years to marry. She fails to find her ideal, and Dan Shevlin, a shrewd man of the world, offers to introduce her into smart society through a Mrs. Brooke, provided Margie will give him some security. This security consists of a note which he dictates and Margie recklessly signs, to the effect that she loves him and will never regret the six months she has spent with him. Through Mrs. Brooke she buys wonderful clothes, which Shevlin pays for. Mrs. Brooke opens her cottage in Newport and Margie meets her brother, Mark Trelaw, a cripple. She scores a success with rich Tubby Wells and discovers he is secretly married. This information greatly interests Shevlin. Mrs. Brooke confesses she is in Shevlin's power, and Margie begins to feel very uneasy. She has met Jerry Evesham, a poor young man, who greatly attracts her. She tries to break with Shevlin, but he persuades her to meet the very rich Adrian Martin. Mark Trelaw warns her against Shevlin. She confesses to Jerry that she is as poor as he. Under unusual circumstances she meets Martin. She learns that he knows Jerry and goes to his home to ask him to do what he can to help Jerry along. Jerry calls to see Martin, and Margie hides. Jerry sees her and suspects the worst. As he is getting on a train to leave Newport Margie rushes after him. Later she leaves the train with Jerry still doubtful. She is very unhappy. Jerry's aunt gives her a lift back to town.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

IT WAS like Shevlin, too, to be frank when it was least expected. He said dryly to Margie:

"You have arrived at a great domestic crisis. We happen to be broke, wiped out. Now just how soon do you think you can marry a millionaire? It would be very helpful and accommodating if you'd pick out one tonight."

Under his satiric voice, there was something like a thread of seriousness, something menacing even.

"I'm afraid I don't know any well enough," she said evasively, coolly.

"You don't? . . . What about Adrian Martin?"

"I did what you asked me to. I met him."

"Yes, I know; I know. And visited him the same night—alone in his house."

A quick catch of breath in her throat . . . how did Shevlin know that, how had he found that out? She had said nothing to Carlotta, nothing to anyone.

He was grinning at her, in his hard way, enjoying her surprise and fear.

"I—I—well, you must know that I only—."

Shevlin yawned. "Why apologize? It was what I wanted you to do. But—to get down to cases—why not marry Martin? Can you?"

"I can't. I wouldn't if I could, but I can't."

"Don't be so sure. A man who has had three wives is probably not incurable. I'd like you to try."

"I—but it's impossible."

Carlotta's hand strayed over, and her fingers clasped Margie's as if for comfort, as if saying: "It's your turn now. Never mind!"

"Well?" Shevlin's inquiry came out of the darkness beneath the trees, like a rasp of command. He was leaning forward across the iron table, studying her in the dimness, not moving.

"I can't."

"Why can't you?"

"I don't like him."

"What has that got to do with it?" You like his money, don't you?"

"Dan, leave her alone."

He threw Mrs. Brooke a single glance. Not a word spoken, but it silenced her.

A pause of further silence, while Shevlin scratched a match. "Well, I'm willing to be reasonable," he said at last. "What's the matter with Adrian Martin? Come on, let's get to the bottom of this. Why don't you like him?"

"I—I just don't."

"Suppose I told you I didn't care whether you did or not?"

"Oh!" Margie felt her self-control deserting her. What right had he to badger her like this?" Badgering women, taking advantage of people who couldn't fight back. She struggled helplessly to tell him what she thought, to tell him how she detested him. But couldn't. She could do nothing.

"Well, what about it?"

She couldn't stand it any longer. "I tell you, I won't," she cried, her voice breaking now. "You're—you ask too much. I did what you said. And—and I'm not going to see him again. He's—why you don't know what I know about him."

"Oh? What do you know that I don't? He was looking at her with sharp interest now.

Confused, unhappy, anxious to escape. Margie poured out what Jerry had told her about Adrian Martin.

"He—he even killed a man once. In South America, it was. I know it. I—he makes me afraid."

"What! Killed a man . . . killed? Tell me more. Where was this South America? When? When did it happen? Come on now!"

"Dan, don't!" Carlotta had stirred in her chair with a little frightened movement.

"When did it happen?" he repeated.

"Last year, I think. I don't know."

He flung question after question at her, sharp quick questions that went to the root of the story, and pressed on every side, she told the little she knew, only leaving out Jerry's name.

Then Shevlin leaned back, smiling broadly. He snapped his fingers with sudden cheerfulness.

"On the whole," he drawled, "you may be right. I don't suppose I should ask you to try to marry a man who's done a thing like that. It wouldn't be . . . fair."

His eyes went to Carlotta. She sat like a woman turned to stone, with something anguished in her face and bearing.

Margie stared. Her puzzled mind tried to understand. She felt that she was only a step away from understanding everything.

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE dinner table again—the dinner table with its soft candle light, its delicate English china, its antique silver service.

And Carlotta sitting quiet, biting her lip, thinking hidden thoughts. Margie, silent, too, wondering. But Dan Shevlin talked for both, a constant stream of dry crackling phrases that would have been funny if they had not also been cruel.

Margie had never seen him so gay, in such high spirits. But there was something nervous in him, as if he too, were planning . . .

It had been a long day. Margie was tired. Besides they did not want her around. She murmured something about going up to bed and reading.

Half-way up the stairs, she halted and came back for a book. Shevlin was over at the writing-desk, opening a drawer. Mrs. Brooke was watching him speechlessly. He took something from the drawer.

Margie gave a little start. He had taken out a black automatic revolver, and was filling the clip with cartridges. She backed away, stole noiselessly up the stairs again. A low murmur of words floated mysteriously to her ears.

"Dan . . . don't. I'm afraid. Adrian Martin—won't stand for anything. I tell you I know what he's like . . ."

A heavy laugh was followed by something muttered, something that had a boastful ring. Then the slam of the front door, and a deathly siince.

Margie stood in the center of her room, not moving. Scraps of phrases, little, unexplained incidents, things seen and heard and felt—they all came crowding into her mind now.

Dan Shevlin loading automatic.—Carlotta's terror—this mention again of Adrian Martin—what did it all mean?

Suddenly, so clearly and vividly that she wondered she had not guessed before, Margie read the riddle.

Her mind darted back. In a flash she saw everything—everything! Why it was that Shevlin had been eager to learn that Tuby Wells was already married against his mother's wishes. Why he had been so eager to hear the details of Adrian Martin's secret. Secrets—they were his business—the secrets of persons well connected, rich, influential. Blackmail!

Margie walked nervously up and down. She had no proof, no real proof, and yet she wanted none. A hundred little things pointed it out. Tubby Wells' changed attitude towards her—she understood now. He believed her only an accomplice of Shevlin's, ferreting out secrets through her personal charms, and betraying confidences. An accomplice—she had been one without knowing it. No wonder Shevlin had been cheerful tonight when she had told him about Adrian Martin; she saw now why he hadn't pressed her to continue her intimacy with Martin, why he had loaded the automatic.

She was trembling. She couldn't keep still. What was she to do? Tell Shevlin, of course, tell him she knew. And Mrs. Brooke—Mrs. Brooke, who was really an accomplice—what about her?

Margie marched from the room on an impulse, hurried down stairs. Carlotta was sitting at the window, not moving.

"Oh, I thought you'd gone to bed." A flat, monotonous voice, the voice of someone undergoing a strain.

"I meant to—but I . . . I

WILSON GAINS HIS END AT HEAVY MONEY COST

He Wins the Support of Princeton Trustees But the Offer of $500,000 Is Withdrawn—A New Storm

In 1908 Wilson kept himself within call of the Democratic National Convention, though scarcely believing it likely he would be nominated for the presidency. This was revealed in the chapter of "The Life and Letters of Woodrow Wilson" published yesterday in the Sun-Telegraph. He had no confidence in Bryan, who dominated the convention. Meanwhile more trouble arose for him at Princeton.

By RAY STANNARD BAKER

Woodrow Wilson's Revolt

VACATIONS were imperative in Wilson's life. They were imperative not alone for the restoration of a frail body, often overwrought; they were times of clarification of mind, rectification of spirit. Though concerned with affairs, Wilson was essentially a man of thought. And thought demands retirement and quietude.

He loved particularly the town and the quiet countryside of Old Lyme in Connecticut.

It was to Old Lyme that Wilson retired in the summer of 1909, heavily burdened with the problems of Princeton. He had faced defeat on his program for social co-ordination; he was now threatened with still another discomfiture. The Procter gift of $500,000 for the graduate college, with the encouragement it gave to the forces in the university which he considered decentralizing, had tipped the scales against him. Every one wanted the money; few seemed to care how it was used.

He was not yet ready to stop fighting, but his doubt as to whether he could continue as "ringmaster" was increasing.

During the same "summer of clarification" we also find him thinking hard upon the great national and political problems of the day and working out with the same laborious care a restatement of his views on such issues as the tariff and the trusts.

It had been an arduous summer, but Wilson returned full of new vigor. He would go through with the fight.

Wilson met Procter in New York on October 20, 1909, and did his best to win him over—to no avail. The faculty committee on the graduate school worked hard on a report on the site question and split into two factions and made two reports, the majority, consisting of Dean Fine and Profs. Conklin, Daniels and Capps, supporting Wilson's contention that the graduate college must be knit into the university life; and the minority report, signed by West and Hibben, declaring for the off-campus location.

The whole subject, including the reports of the faculty committee, were thoroughly threshed out in a trustees' meeting, October 21. Mr. Pyne offered a brief but extremely direct and conclusive resolution which wholly disregarded both the majority report of the faculty committee and Wilson's own policies as president.

"Resolved, That the very generous offer of Mr. Procter be accepted."

Most Trustees Hostile

Hot discussion followed. Efforts were made to modify or limit the resolution, in deference to Wilson's views, but it was finally voted to accept the gift provided the legal right to use Mrs. Swann's money for a building on the golf links was established. Wilson well knew, however, that the majority of the board was determined to take the money with or without conditions. It should be stated that Mr. Procter intended that not more than $200,000 of his gift be used to erect a dining hall in memory of his father. The rest should be set aside for professorships and scholarships. To such disposition of the funds Wilson had no objection.

Some of the clergymen on the board were among those most eager to accept the money without asking any questions.

"It was interesting to note the attitude of the clergy t'other day," wrote Cleveland H. Dodge to Wilson. "If they, after confessing they know nothing of the merits of the case, succumb at once to the bribe of a dubious $500,000—query—what would they do if $2,000,000 for your social reorganization was dangled in their faces?"

There is evidence that at this time he considered his own resignation as a solution of the problem. He need not have remained. His own prestige in the country was such that he could have found a place in public life at any time. And there were again glittering offers from other universities, including one of the presidency of the University of Minnesota.

Wilson loved Princeton too much, considered the fight too serious, to give it up until he had exhausted every resource. He now tried various methods of compromise, proposing at one time—and too hastily!—the scheme of using the Swann bequest for a graduate quadrangle on the campus as planned and the Procter gift for a separate building on the golf links. He took up this plan, after consulting Pyne, with Procter himself.

But the West group, now confident of winning, insisted that Mrs. Swann's bequest, as well as a designated portion of Procter's gift and other funds pledged, be used for a graduate college on the golf links.

Ready to Quit Princeton

It was the last straw. He felt that he had done everything possible and that the only course left open was his resignation. On December 22, 1909, on his return from his talk with Procter, he sat down in the Jersey City Station and penciled the following note to Pyne:

"I spent an hour and 10 minutes with Mr. Procter this afternoon. He is willing to adjust the terms of his offer to my suggestion. The acceptance of this gift has taken the guidance of the university out of my hands entirely—and I seem to have come to the end."

The opposition had never supposed that Wilson would carry the struggle to the extraordinary point of suggesting his resignation on the question of accepting a gift of $500,000. It was unbelievable! It had never been done!

Pyne responded to Wilson's note on December 24:

"My dear Woodrow:

"I trust that what was evidently a hasty note penciled by you in the Jersey City station does not represent your well considered conclusions, and that you will withdraw it upon further consideration.

"Yours affectionately,
"M. TAYLOR PYNE.
"President Woodrow Wilson, LL.D.,
"Princeton, New Jersey."

But Pyne was mistaken. Neither he nor others had got the full measure of their man. Although the note was hastily written in a moment of agitation, Wilson's judgment had not been hastily formed. When the brief message from Pyne came on Christmas Eve Wilson wrote off a full reply.

It was the kind of a fighting letter, all guards down, that was not only devastating to Wilson's opponents, but it brought the entire board of trustees up standing. It dramatized, as nothing else could have done, the fundamental issues of the struggle.

It was on December 28—Wilson's birthday—that the replies began coming in to him. He was 53 years old, and he had flung down the gauge of battle!

Never before had there been such excitement in the grave councils of the Princeton board of trustees. A leader leads; and Wilson's friends not only came vigorously to his support, but he brought around the doubters. He was worth more to Princeton even than Procter's $500,000!

In a very important letter to Thomas D. Jones on January 11, Wilson put, with startling clarity, his view of the situation, explained why he had not based his fight, as he had been urged to do, upon the issue of Dean West personally—and came out flatfootedly for the rejection of Procter's money.

Trustees' Bitter Contest

It may be imagined how hot were the conferences, how urgent the letters, between Christmas and the meeting of the board of trustee on January 13, 1910. Pyne was the only outstanding member of the board who was strongly opposed to Wilson, and every effort was made by other trustees—we have much correspondence relating to the matter—to bring him around. In his own way Pyne was just as sincere, devoted and interested in Princeton as any one of the trustees. He was a rich man, owned a beautiful home in Princeton and was intimately familiar with the life of the university. No alumnus had been more generous than he.

The struggle worried him intensely; he could not think of giving up Procter's half million! He wrote to Wilson January 10:

"I have worried very much over this matter. I want to meet your wishes and at the same time my views are so strong as to the danger and unwisdom of refusing Procter's gift that I have been torn almost in two. I hope that some solution may be found that will satisfy us all—in part at least."

A meeting of the graduate school committee was held just before the trustees' meeting on January 13. It was dramatic in the extreme, for Wilson's opponents, now seeing defeat ahead of them, cleverly turned the tables upon him. After Wilson had set forth his position regarding the Procter gift, Pyne presented a letter from Procter accepting the compromise proposal that Wilson had made several weeks before that the Procter gift be used separately from the Swann bequest and that his graduate college be built on the golf links. It took Wilson wholly by surprise and for a [illegible] he was utterly confused, and [illegible] asserted that the [illegible] of site was not essential that the faculty could "make this school [illegible] success anywhere in Mercer county." And then he put the issue plainly and bluntly.

"The whole trouble is that Dean West's ideas and ideals are not the ideas and ideals of Princeton!"

"I was so much taken aback by Mr. Proctor's letter and so angered at the evident trick that had been played us that I did not feel at all sure that I had acted with self-control and propriety on Thursday last, and it reassured me immensely that you should have thought that I bore myself properly," he wrote to Henry B. Thompson.

The fact was that Wilson's proposal of two graduate colleges had been put forward merely as a possible compromise in the hope of making Proctor see his point of view; but it was undoubtedly a tactical blunder on his part. It was the kind of dickering—a dicker—he intensely disliked and should never have attempted—in which his opponents were far cleverer than he.

After the exciting meeting of the committee the board itself met. Procter's new offer was presented by Pyne, and Wilson read aloud a joint communication from the majority members of the faculty committee on the graduate school—Dean Fine, and Profs. Capps, Conklin and Daniel. It was a powerful statement of the essential issues at stake.

A Victory for Wilson

Dr. Jacobus moved that Mr. Procter's offer be declined. It was clearly seen by everyone that Wilson's supporters were now in command. He was winning, even against a million dollars! To delay such decisive action, however, a substitute resolution was introduced, and finally adopted:

"Resolved, That the whole question involved in Mr. Procter's offer be referred to a special committee of five to be appointed by the president, to report at an adjourned meeting of the board to be held at 11 o'clock Thursday morning, February 10."

The president appointed to the committee Dr. Dixon, Mr. Green, Mr. Dodge, Mr. Thompson and Mr. Thomas D. Jones, chairman.

It was a substantial but hard-won victory for Wilson—one of those victories, however, that leave deep scars.

The so-called Jones committee began work at once and after arduous labors made a unanimous report, in which those of the "West party" agreed with those of the "Wilson party." It is a remarkable and clear-headed presentation of the situation. Before it could be presented, however, Procter, on February 6, anticipating the unfavorable conclusions, withdrew his offer entirely.

But the storm had not yet fully broken. The public, let alone the Princeton constituency, had not awakened to the extraordinary and unprecented action of a university in refusing a million dollars in gifts. It was inconceivable! Yet it had been done.

On February 14 Wilson, utterly worn out with the strain of the battle, both physical and emotional, sailed for Bermuda for a short rest. The cyclone—and it was not less than that—swept through the world of Princeton while he was gone.

(Tomorrow's instalment, the final chapter of this series, will describe Woodrow Wilson's closing days as president of Princeton University, and how fate intervened to cause his withdrawal at a time when he seemed to be a victor in the university's great controversy, finally resigned from Princeton to enter politics as a candidate for governorship of New Jersey).

want to talk to you."

"About what?"

"I've just found out," said Margie simply, "found out what's been happening."

"What do you mean?" Mrs. Brooke's glance was quick and a little afraid.

"Oh—about Dan Shevlin—I've found out he—he blackmails people."

A long pause, then an intake of breath. "My dear child, what on earth are you talking about. Have you been reading too many detective stories."

"Please. Please don't treat me like a fool. I—I really know."

Mrs. Brooke searched her face, [illegible] her eyes, and her own face [illegible] heavy and tired. With a little gesture she seemed to admit everything.

"Well . . . you had to know . . . sooner or later."

"But you—"

"Oh, I'm with him, too, all the way!" She spoke almost defiantly. "Since you want to know everything, I may as well tell you."

"But I don't understand—I don't see how you—"

Mrs. Brooke put up her hand. "Don't! Don't talk to me like that," she said tremulously. "It isn't my fault. I told him some things I happened to know long ago. He used them. Then I found out, too. I tried to stop him, but he's bad, bad all the way through. Then you came along, and you told him about Tubby Wells. He got a lot of money out of Wells—and has lost it already in speculation. He's a madman when it comes to gambling. He'll gamble on anything. And now it's Adrian Martin, and I'm afraid. This can't go on forever. Sometimes I see people looking at me, and I wonder if they know. It's ghastly, ghastly! I keep smiling, but all the time I'm frightened. I'm frightened about what may happen. Now you know, now you know!"

Margie sank into a chair. It was a kind of degradation she was witnessing, she felt. Someone fine, with fine impulses, turned into an enemy of society. And turned through love—love that could make people good, and could make them bad, too.

She had a sudden, clear picture of the whole thing. Mrs. Brooke, well-connected, with a secure place in the social world, meeting a gambler on the Riviera, finding herself unable to resist him, losing her money to him, being drawn bit by bit into the shoddy practices by which he lived. It was pitiful.

But she couldn't say: "This can't go on. You've got to get away from him, or send him away." Not to anyone who was in love as Mrs. Brooke was in love. Mrs. Brooke, who no longer had any will of her own.

Then suddenly Mrs. Brooke began to sob. She got up unsteadily. Margie moved towards her.

"No. I'm going up to my room. I'd rather be alone—now. I'd rather be alone. I feel too miserable. But I'm glad I've told you—glad. You're a sweet little thing. I never thought Dan would use you, too—like this. I'm sorry—sorry. Oh, perhaps it doesn't matter. I try to tell myself it doesn't."

Margie was alone. She had found out, she had learned the truth, but what was she going to do now?

Tell Shevlin she wouldn't go on, of course. Tell him right away. When he came back tonight—if he came back. It had all been a mistake anyway. Only a man like Shevlin would have been willing to suggest the plan in the first place—seeing that a girl had clothes, introductions, everything in order that she might marry a wealthy man. Why it was fantastic, crazy!

As for the money that had been spent, the tainted money wrung from unhappy, unwilling men and women, she would get that back to him some other way. She had paid him already, if the secrets she had given him were to be counted, but she would not pay with other people's misery.

She would tell him simply, and he would be afraid and be glad to let her go. As for Jerry—she'd write him in care of Mrs. Farrington, tell him everything, be honest about everything. If he cared—well, [illegible] it would be all right. And he must care, he must! . . .

She looked back, remembering New York, the office, the apartment with her four friends. "I'm a million years older!" she thought. "I think differently and want different things. But what I've seen and done! . . ."

The sound of a car outside, footsteps, and then Dan Shevlin stumbling into the room. Smiling grimly but with his face dead white, his hands shaking. He went over to the decanter, poured himself a drink, as if he needed it badly.

"That's better," he half whispered. He turned and saw Margie, sitting silent and watchful.

"Hello!" he exclaimed with an air of bravado. "It's the little duchess! Well, what are you looking at me like that for? Eh?"

CHAPTER XXV.

MARGIE'S heart was beating violently. "I must keep my head! I mustn't be afraid!" she was saying to herself. And aloud:

"I've been waiting for you."

"Well, that's sweet of you. Sitting up for poor old Dan—waiting for him!"

"REALly, my dear, I've honestly never seen ANYthing QUITE so funny as the spectacle of ARab and NOIsy sort of playing FOOTball MADly at this point because I mean neither ONE of them has a THING but the UNIform and the amBItion, which this COACH person told me was HOPEless, because he said they were nice BOYS and he liked having them round and all, but he said it actually LAID him an EGG the way they played FOOTball, because he said they honestly hadn't the VAGUEst iDEA what it was all aBOUT—can you BEAR it, my dear? I mean they just AREn't the athaLETic TYPE or something because you reMEMber how it was about POlo last Summer, my dear? I mean it was honestly paTHETic the way they sort of EARnestly atTEMPted to become POlo players, all to no PURpose, do you know what I mean? But what SIMply SLAYS me is the way ARab inSISTS on inSISTing that he is making treMENdous PROGress with the FOOTball situation, sort of inCINerating that at any MOment he will prob'ly be elected CAPtain of the TEAM, no less, because I REALLY think it is perfectly POISonous of anybody to be terribly conCEITed and all about himself especially when they are practicably a FAILure at EVerything the way Arab is, my dear—I mean I ACtually DO!"

Love's Embers ☐ Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife" ☐ By ADELE GARRISON

Red Beard and Philip Veritzen Stalk Through Madge's Troubled Dreams

KATIE sniffed reproachfully as I told her that we would better forget all about the men in the shack back of the farm, because Dicky had told me they were not dangerous.

"Dot alvays vay," she said. "You nefer tink anything happen till it do. Den you vake oop. I tell you dose men shoost like snakes in grass, und you look oudt dey don't bite you. Vot Meester Graham vant? Vill he let Junior go oop play mit dot dog?"

"No, he does not trust them that far, Katie," I returned, "although he says the men would return him to us safely if he did stray that far. But I wish Junior to remain in the yard and orchard, and I shall ask you to watch him while I am gone to the city."

"How long you goin' be gone?" she asked.

"I am not quite sure," I returned. "I have some shopping to do for Junior, so I shall stay with Mrs. Underwood until I get it completed."

"All right, I feex," she replied and went out, while I resumed my pacing of the room, my vanity more upset than I care to acknowledge.

Katie's weird story definitely had established one thing in my mind. Dicky had recognized one of the unpleasant and mysterious neighbors, and he shared with the man patently disguised some prodigious jest which he did not intend to share with me. His statement that Junior was in no danger from the men fitted in with his behavior, but his warning to me concerning Eleanor Lincoln was diametrically opposed to it.

If the red-bearded man was so harmless that we need have no fear for Junior's safety, and also shared with Dicky a secret affording as much mirth as Katie had described, why should he fear that Miss Lincoln would be annoyed by him?

As I ranged uneasily up and down the room I remembered with uncanny distinctness what Dicky had requested of me. He had asked me to cultivate Miss Lincoln's acquaintance, to make the girl feel so much at home at the farmhouse that if she were frightened by the red-bearded man she would rush to us as if to a sanctuary.

Was it possible that Dicky, obsessed by his desire to obtain the girl as a model for one of the characters in a historical novel he was to illustrate was deliberately trading upon my generosity? With a little shudder, I stopped my pacing and began to disrobe, determined to banish all troublesome thoughts.

It was a long time before I went to sleep, even though I tried every means in my power to induce slumber. I counted sheep, said the multiplication table backwards and forward and recited to myself all the poems I knew, but it was long past midnight before I closed my eyes. And even then I was not free from the worries which had perplexed my day.

Through my dreams stalked the figures of the red-bearded man of whose conversation with Dicky Katie had given me so vivid a description. Fantastically Dicky trailed him, forever shouting the phrase I had heard from Katie as coming from his lips:

"Who touches a hair of that red head!"

Then the figures melted away and changed to that of Philip Veritzen, tall, stately, always with a cynical smile upon his lips as he regarded me. I dreamed that to every suggestion of mine he returned a disapproving comment until in despair I asked him:

"What do you want then?"

In my dream I regretted the questio, for I saw Mr. Veritzen lean toward me, his face changed into tenderness, and ask me significantly:

"Can't you guess?"

The sounding of my alarm clock released me from the thraldom of my dreams. I was glad, indeed, to remember that I could snatch a nap upon the car chair of the early train.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

by HELEN ROWLAND

WHY MEN LIE TO WOMEN

WHY do men lie to the women they love?

Why will a man never offer the naked truth to a woman without dressing it all up in the seven veils of Salome?

* * *

Don't deny it! A man will lie to the woman he loves sooner than to anybody else on earth. It is one of the proofs that he loves her! His love is never absolutely dead until he stops taking the trouble to camouflage himself and begins carelessly telling her the bitter truth.

HELEN ROWLAND

Is it feminine suspicion that causes the first masculine lie—or it is the masculine lie that causes the first feminine suspicion? Did the hen or the egg come first?

Is it a fact that no woman will believe the simple truth or is it merely a masculine fallacy? Whatever the answer, it never occurs to the average man to tell a woman the TRUTH so long as he can think of anything more convincing or interesting to tell her.

Yet nine times out of ten, if a man would tell her the honest truth a woman would forgive him for almost any crime on earth—and blame it all on the other woman.

A woman always suspects that a man is lying to her long before she catches him. And HE always suspects that she suspects him long before he begins lying to her.

Many a sensible woman has gone into marriage determined to place BLIND FAITH in her husband, believing that faith begets faithfulness—only to awaken too late to the knowledge that her husband was lying to her quite as casually and habitually as other women's husbands.

Many an idealistic man has started out with the honest determination to be "on the square" with a woman—only to discover that he was living under just as deep and dark a cloud of suspicion as all the faithless husbands around him.

In one case the egg came first—in the other, the hen.

* * *

A man's faith in the policy of never telling the truth to a woman is so firmly rooted that even though she may catch him in another woman's arms, he will vow to heaven that it was only her "imagination" and that her eyes are deceiving her.

* * *

A woman's faith in the policy of never believing a man is so deeply implanted that she won't even believe him when he tells her that he is sick and tired of her!

* * *

Oh, what's the use? A woman can't bear to HEAR the truth and a man can't bear to TELL it. And as long as this dizzy old world keeps going 'round, the hen will go right on laying the egg and the egg in turn will become a hen—and nobody can tell you which of them STARTED it all!

FOR THE LOVELORN

A Lonesome Girl

DEAR MISS GALE:

Have been a constant reader of your column for many years, and I find it very interesting. I am 19 years old and am truly in love with a boy of the same age. Now, Miss Gale, my parents object very much to this boy, and forbid me to go with him again. I have not seen him for four months, and have only three dates with others in that time. I find that the average boys are too fast for me. My boy friend was very nice. He is not like most boys of today, that is, he does not pet, smoke or indulge in any such things. He is what some girls would say "slow." But, Miss Gale, I love him, and would like to know just what to do. Should I tell him I love him or do as mother says and forget him. I feel that I will never find another like him. Would it be all right for me to write to him as I've told him not to write or call on me as my parents objected. I am sure he cares for me, for several times he told me and he also asked me to get married.

A "LONESOME GIRL."

You don't say what you parents' objection to this boy is, and that seems to me to be the real problem. From your description, he seems to be a model young man, but your mother and father must have some basis for their feeling in the matter. Talk it over with them and find out just what it is.

Ray's Girl

DEAR MISS GALE:

I met a certain fellow, aged about 19, for whom I care a lot. Of course I had never been out with him, nor hardly spoken to him, although I had seen him several times a day. I left the city about seven months ago and have not seen him. Is there any way of meeting him accidentally? Neither has friends to introduce us properly, as we met accidentally. Do you think it necessary to have someone introduce us after we have met and spoke to each other? Would it be proper for me to call him on the phone and tell him who I am, or shall I try to forget him, which, of course is hard, as I think of him day and night? Should I have told him when I was leaving the city? I had heard that he is one of these real nice boys. He's also bashful. Could that have kept him from speaking to me in a more serious manner? I'm past 17. You may say we are both too young, but my only thought is to find out whether he cared or still cares for me, because if he cared for me like I cared for him it would be a pity to be separated. If by any chance I find out he doesn't care for me then I'll be perfectly satisfied, as I have many friends and can surely say myself that I have been a decent girl, as I never even had a date with a fellow, nor was kissed, although we always went out in bunches, both boys and girls. But I know enough about the modern girls and boys. Now you have to smoke, drink, etc., to be popular, because that only cheapens you. I'm past 17, as I have said, but many boys are anxious to get a date with me. Several have asked permission to call at my home, but I tell them that I'm too young. Several have offered me cigarets but when I said I had no use for them all they told me was they will not force me to take them. So here it is, girls. I could have dates, drink, smoke, etc., but I think of the future. So my advice to girls is to make a fellow work hard before he wins her. And to the boys, please don't force girls to smoke, etc.

RAY'S GIRL.

It is up to the boy to find someone to introduce him, my dear. If he is really interested, he will find a way.

Worried

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am in love with a young man three years my senior. He is wonderful, Miss Gale. Everything a girl could hope for. Good-looking and a wonderful personality. He is wonderful to me. But he has one bad habit and that is drinking. Do you think he could stop this if he wanted to? He does not drink steadily, so what's the difference, as I have always hated drinking. Now I have asked him to quit and he has consented, but will he do it? Now, Miss Gale, if he breaks his word would you quit going with him? Understand, I love him, but do you think he loves me if he cannot give up drinking for me? We are not engaged, as he is still going to school, although he is 23 years of age. He is going to be a dentist. Please advise me what to do and I will be greatly helped, as this is a great problem.

WORRIED.

If he really loves you, my dear, he will do as you ask, I am sure. Give him a chance.

Billie

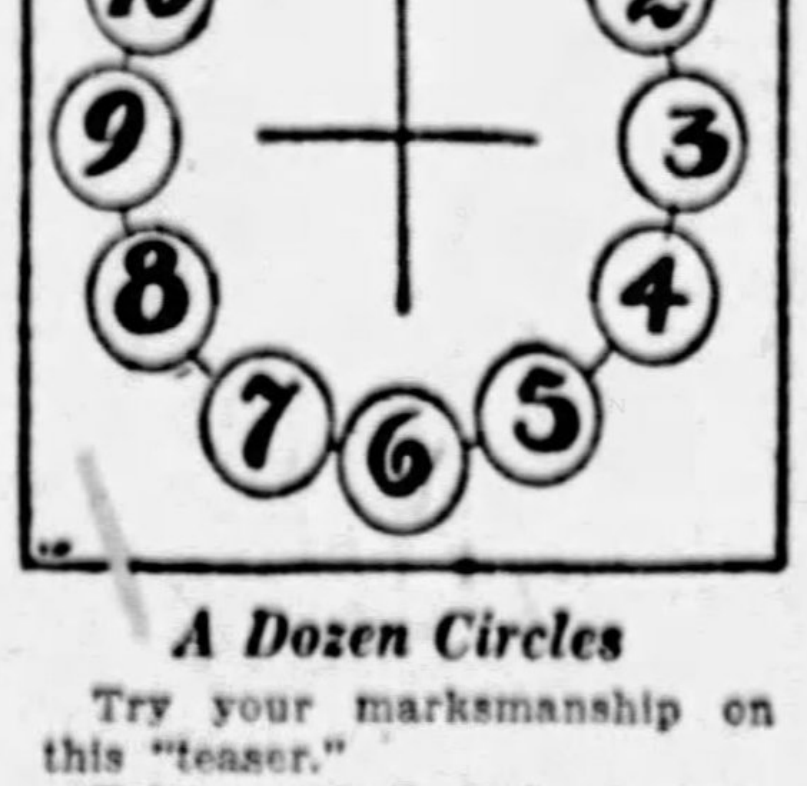
DEAR MISS GALE:

I am in my middle teens. I wrote before about stating that I thought smoking and drinking are all right and that honorable and decent girls are found in public dance halls. I also stated that petting was "just some fun," but I want to take back my former ideas. I do still love dance halls, why I don't know. I can swim, dance, skate and can drive a car but I love the dance halls best. Here is my trouble, Miss Gale, and I know you will tell me which way I shoud go. I met a fellow two years ago. At the time we met he had a "steady," of which I did not know. He, so to speak showered his attention on me for about four weeks until his steady found out. Then he forgot me and everywhere I went I saw them together, dances, parties or picnics. Oh, how it hurt, and pierced my pride like an arrow. But now, he has come back with a fine story. He says he just discovered that he doesn't love her and again wants my company. But I think it is because since two years I have changed. Then I was a shy, bashful girl who couldn't dance, never saw a cabaret then and used no cosmetics. But then I reversed my ideas and habits, and became a popular dancer, an all around athlete. Now I have just given my promise to go steady with a chap who doesn't dance very much, but who has a car and whose girl has lost her place to me. I am sure I love this boy, but still there is my old infatuation for the other. Should I forget him? Or do the same as he did with me, kid him along and then hurt him as he did me? I am now in a place to do so. Please help me. I welcome your reader's comments.

BILLIE.

Don't give this boy a second chance to hurt you. Forget him.

TEASERS



A Dozen Circles

Try your marksmanship on this "teaser."

Take a pencil, look at circle 1; then turn your head and try to hit circle 1 by placing the point of the pencil against the paper. Do the same with the remaining circles in rotation. How many hits can you score out of a possible 12?

Yesterday's Teaser

There were 17 tributaries to main river. To guess 17 is exceptional; 16 or 18, very good; 15 or 19, good; 14 or 20, average; 13 or 21, fair; less than 12 or more than 22, poor.

Twenty-one towns and cities were also on the map. An estimate of 21 is exceptional; 20-22, very good; 18-24, good; 17-25, average; 16-26, fair; less than 15 or more than 27, poor.

Margin Fingers Burned; Conductor Tackles Chief

By B. C. FORBES

THE warnings given here against buying boomed stocks on margin have been amply justified. Many issues have dropped $20 a share, not a few have tumbled $30 a share and some have collapsed $40 or $50 a share. Nor is it by any means certain that the downward movement is over in those stocks which have been forced to great heights.

Oil shares, which have been spoken of more favorably in this column have done moderately well. The possibility, even the probability, is that the best oil stocks will fare better than other classes in the near future.

This is a good time, in my opinion, to keep on hand liquid cash in order to be in a position to take advantage of bargains which develop by and by.

RAILWAY presidents used to be regarded as austere, high-handed, forbidding gentlemen. How democratic and approachable they have become is illustrated by this incident:

Whiteford R. Cole, president of the Louisville & Nashville, was sitting in a room on one of his crack trains talking with men when in strode a veteran conductor. He excused himself for interrupting the conversation, but explained that he had a big favor to ask, a favor which apparently could be granted only by the president.

Mr. Cole smiled, listened, and then replied that he would be glad to take care of the matter personally. The conductor withdrew, happy.

"It's very increasting to me to see how free your men feel to come and tackle you for favors," I remarked.

"That's the spirit we have all over our system and all through our organization," remarked Mr. Cole. "We all regard ourselves as members of one big family."

WHAT industrial visions are conjured up by London's announcement of a new electrical apparatus which can cook a steak in 30 seconds, bake a potato in 60 seconds and fry an egg in two seconds! Will this invention hasten the coming of the five-day work week, now desired by many, but not yet generally feasible?

ARE many workers better off than many small business men? This question, recently discussed in this column, has brought this letter:

"Just this morning I spoke to a young business man who is liquidating his business. My brother gave up his furniture business and went to work as a painter at $12 a day. I, myself, would give up my business if I could sell my stock, about $40,000, at 25 cents on the dollar, and would go to work, as I am not making my expenses. And I could name you a dozen or more small business men who would do the same. Yes, by all means, the worker is better off today than a small business man."

A. P. Gianinni, the forceful head of the Mammoth Bank of Italy, emphasized this same point the other day while telling me how his bank divides 40 per cent of its profits with its employes. He stoutly declares that a young man has far better prospects if he joins a big concern than if he opens a small business of his own which is never likely to amount to much. Is he right?

CONVENTIONS are now a popular feature of modern business. New York's Savings Bank Association has just held its annual convention on shipboard during a trip to Bermuda. The bankers greatly enjoyed the novel and new experience. Doesn't this offer a sugestion for other associations? Nothing is more restful and refreshing than a sea voyage.

ONE reader who quarrels with a recent plea here for the strengthening of our merchant marine, writes:

"How can our foreign debtors pay us when we have a balance of trade coming to us every year? If we deliver the goods abroad in our own bottoms, how can we get the freight paid? Is it good business to sell a surplus commodity on a promise to pay when there is no way the paying can be done? Let the other fellow do a part of the world's work."

CHRISTMAS trade promises to be excellent.

Week Closes Quietly In Local Market

There was very little trading interest displayed on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange during the short week-end session today. Early bids and offers showed no changes from yesterday's late quotations, but there were few actual sales. Not a share of stock changed hands until 10:30, a half hour after the opening.

Westinghouse Airbrake broke the ice on a 15-share trade at 44½, unchanged from Friday's close. This represented the best price on the current recovery which began to show a little speed the middle of the week, when announcement was made of the big French equipment contract. This business amounts to more than $50,000,000 and Westinghouse will get 50 per cent of it through its French subsidiary.

Trading in the fuels was in light volume and prices were practically unchanged. Arkansas Gas developed activity on the close and was handled at 8¾ and 9. Lone Star Gas did not appear on the board until near the close when it sold at 54, unchanged from Friday's last price.

RAILS STRONG AS MARKET ADVANCES

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—(AP.)—Stock prices resumed their upward movement today under the leadership of the investment railroad shares. Some irregularity developed at the opening as a result of week-end realizing sales and experimental bear selling, but offerings were readily absorbed and the general market soon headed upward. Gains of 1 to 3 points were distributed over a wide variety of issues, while the advances in some of the specialties ran from 4 to 12 points.

Delaware and Hudson, which recently experienced a sinking spell in common with other coal carrying roads on reports of relatively poor business, suddenly jumped 7½ points. Norfolk and Western climbed more than 4 points and Atchison, Union Pacific, St. Louis Southwestern, Atlantic Coast Line, Chicago Northwestern and Western Maryland sold 2 to nearly 4 points higher. Northern Pacific touched a new top.

Expectations of heavy holiday trade accompanied the renewed accumulation of the mercantile shares. R. H. Macy extended its gain to 12 points and Abraham and Straus, Cutlet Company and S. H. Kress sold 5 or more points above yesterday's final quotations. In the drug group new peak prices were established by Sterling Products, United Drug and American Home Products, all up 4 to 7 points.

Radio Corporation ran into most profit taking after its spirited advance earlier in the week, and a few other soft spots developed here and there, but they were disregarded. The closing was firm. Total sales approximated 500,000 shares.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Coke Depression Continues.

The blowing out this week of 119 ovens by the largest furnace interest in the Connellsville territory indicates the end of the beehive coke output slump has not yet arrived. Bargain prices prevail in the coal market, the output being in excess of the demand. Some open shop mines are said to have been selling their product at "any old figure."

Dissension in White Motors.

The regular quarterly dividend of the White Motor Company of Cleveland was reduced from $1 to 50 cents a share at a meeting of the board of directors in Cleveland yesterday. The cut was made, it was announced, because "of conditions in the industry." Winston White, chairman of the board of directors, and Thomas White, vice president of the company, tendered their resignations. The announcement said the resignations were the result of disagreement over policy matters of the company. Their successors will be chosen at a special meeting of the board, date of which has not been set.

Shea Nominated Again.

J. B. Shea, president of the Joseph Horne Company, has been nominated for director of the Equitable, representing the Equitable policyholders in the Pittsburgh district. Mr. Shea has served in that capacity for two years and his re-election is regarded as a practical certainty. The election will be held December 1.

Baldwin Locomotive.

Stockholders of Baldwin Locomotive Works, at a special meeting next Tuesday, will amend the by-laws to increase the directors from 12 to 15. Later in the month Fred J. Fisher and Clarence B. Dilling will be elected to the board. The semi-annual dividends will be acted upon this month, provision for which was made in a reserve set up out of accumulated surplus. Gross sales for 1927 are estimated at about $33,000,000, against $47,951,044 in 1926. Operations will be at 25 per cent this month and December, to fill schedules calling for shipments of locomotives before the end of the year.

United States Rubber.

Net earnings of United States Rubber Company for 10 months this year are estimated at about $5,100,000, a decrease of $2,700,000 from the same period of 1926. Gross sales were about $15,000,000 less, sales of tires alone being 3 per cent under last year. Bank loans on October 31 were $20,500,000 compared with $17,550,000 on June 30.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—(AP.)—The cotton market opened steady today at an advance of 3 points to a decline of 3 points. Prices improved somewhat in early trading on moderate demand promoted by the continued steadiness of Liverpool, which helped to offset unfavorable trade advices from Manchester, and prospects for freezing temperatures in parts of Arkansas and Oklahoma.

January sold up to 20.92 and May to 21.17, net advances of 6 to 7 points by the end of the first hour.

Private cables reported calling, covering and continental buying in the Liverpool market, but that offers for cotton cloths from India were mostly unworkable, and that manufacturers were losing ground.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 120,000 bales, against 169,000 last year.

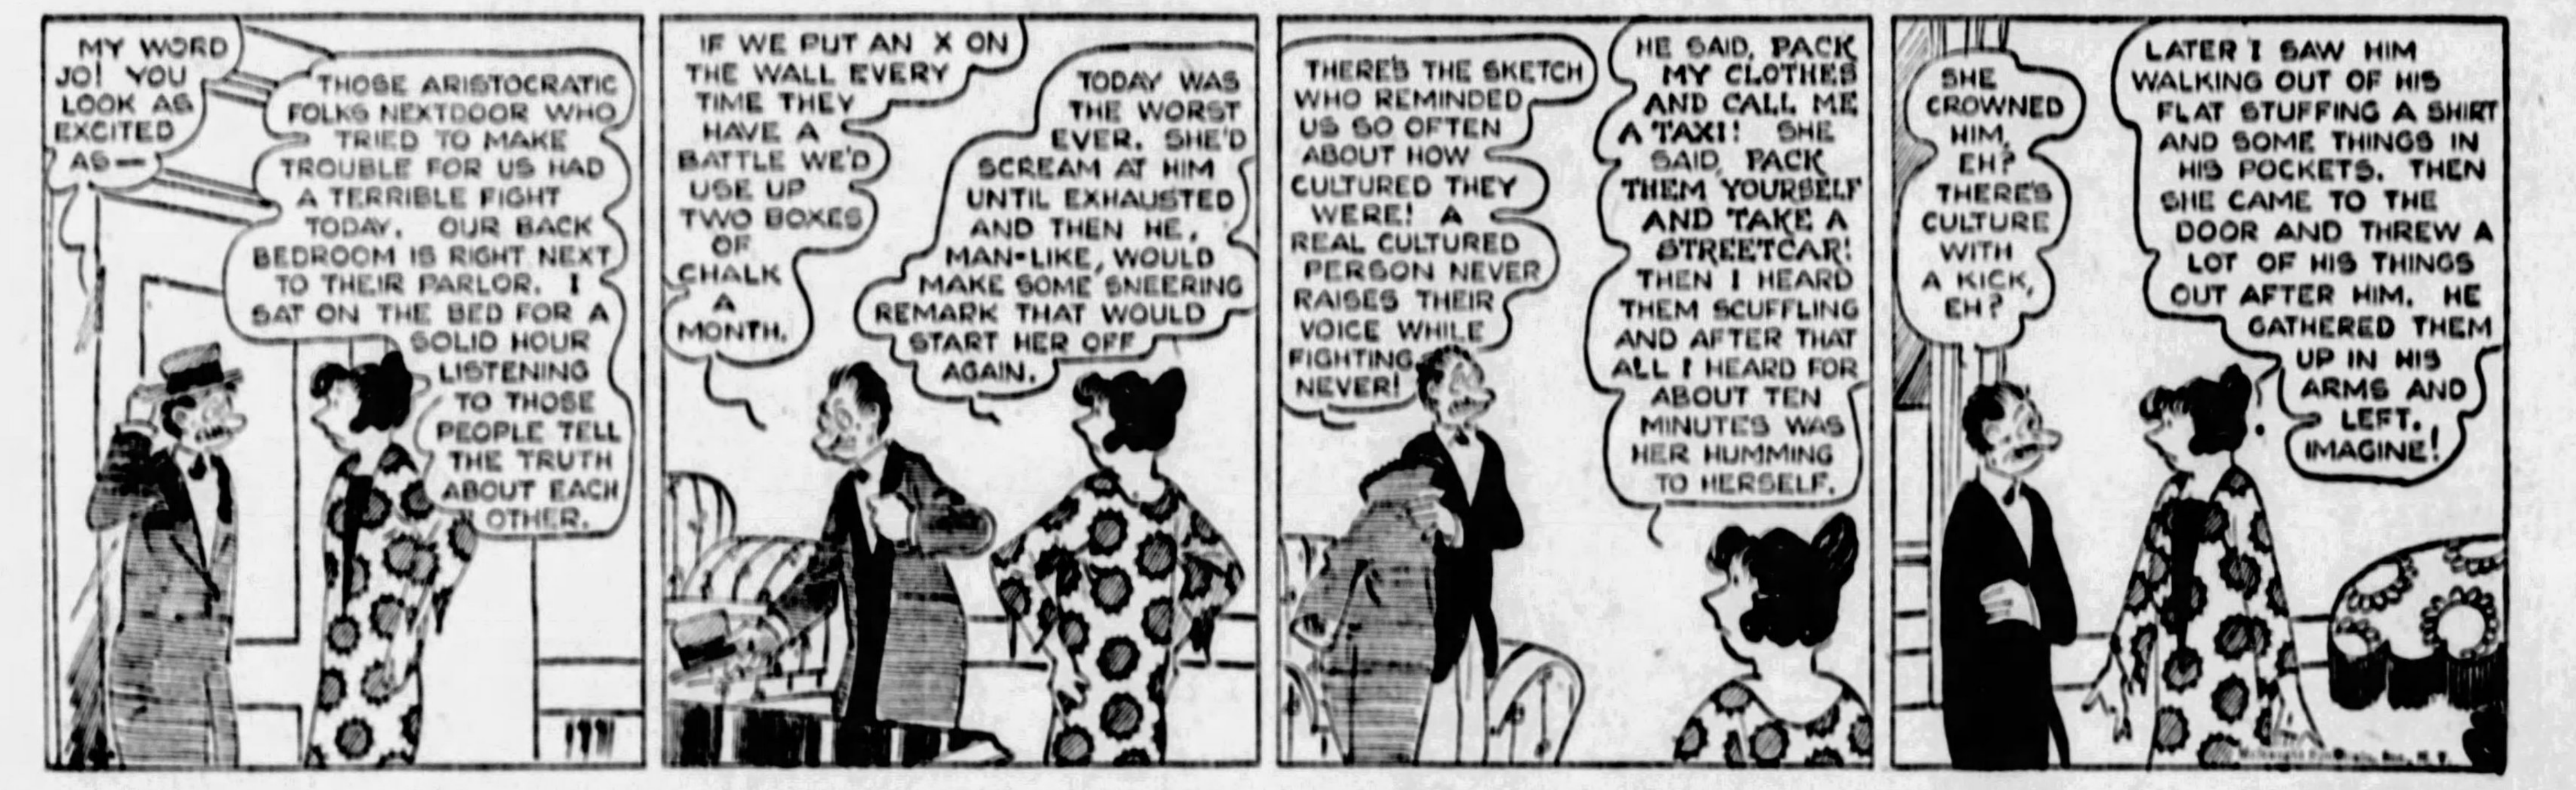
THE BUNGLE FAMILY

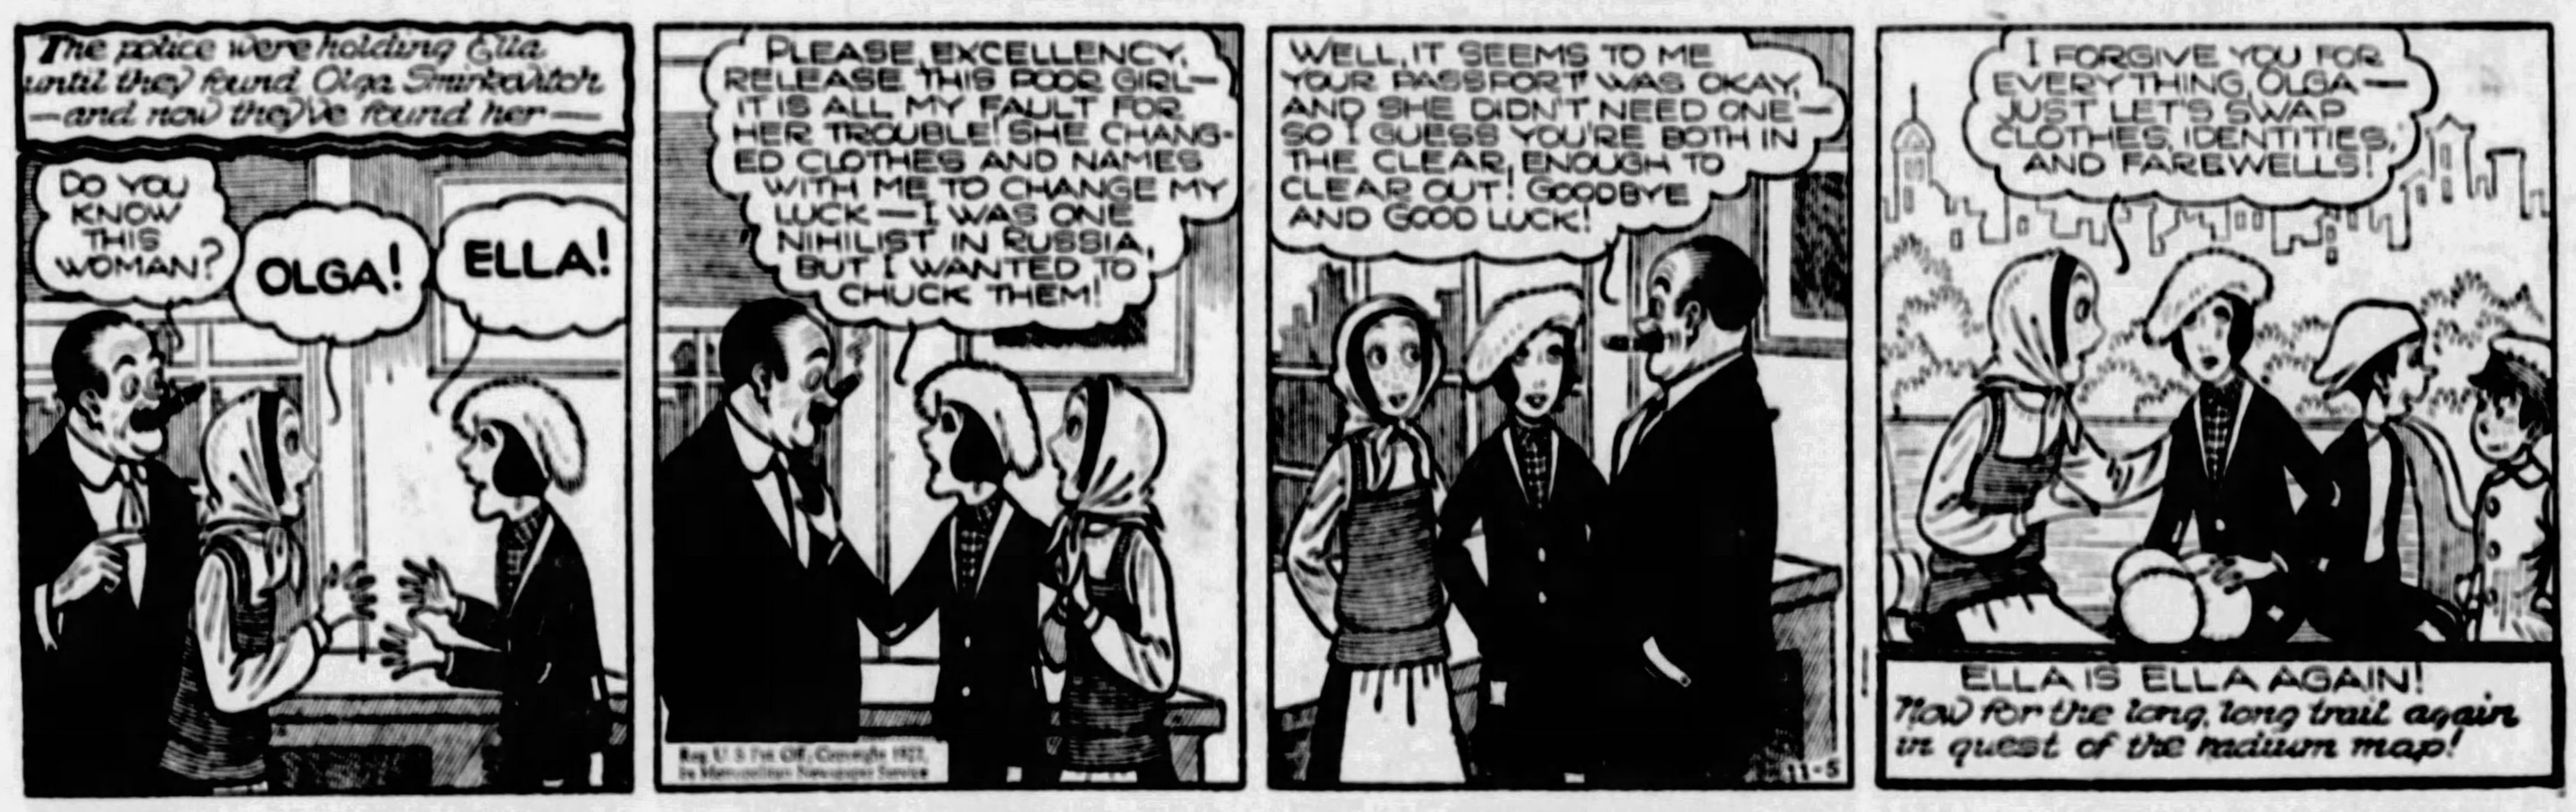
High Words Next Door



MY WORD JO! YOU LOOK AS EXCITED AS—
THOSE ARISTOCRATIC FOLKS NEXTDOOR WHO TRIED TO MAKE TROUBLE FOR US HAD A TERRIBLE FIGHT TODAY. OUR BACK BEDROOM IS RIGHT NEXT TO THEIR PARLOR. I SAT ON THE BED FOR A SOLID HOUR LISTENING TO THOSE PEOPLE TELL THE TRUTH ABOUT EACH OTHER.
IF WE PUT AN X ON THE WALL EVERY TIME THEY HAVE A BATTLE WE'D USE UP TWO BOXES OF CHALK A MONTH.
TODAY WAS THE WORST EVER. SHE'D SCREAM AT HIM UNTIL EXHAUSTED AND THEN HE, MAN-LIKE, WOULD MAKE SOME SNEERING REMARK THAT WOULD START HER OFF AGAIN.
THERE'S THE SKETCH WHO REMINDED US SO OFTEN ABOUT HOW CULTURED THEY WERE! A REAL CULTURED PERSON NEVER RAISES THEIR VOICE WHILE FIGHTING—NEVER!
HE SAID, PACK MY CLOTHES AND CALL ME A TAXI! SHE SAID, PACK THEM YOURSELF AND TAKE A STREETCAR! THEN I HEARD THEM SCUFFLING AND AFTER THAT ALL I HEARD FOR TEN MINUTES WAS HER HUMMING TO HERSELF.
SHE CROWNED HIM, EH? THERE'S CULTURE WITH A KICK, EH?
LATER I SAW HIM WALKING OUT OF HIS FLAT STUFFING A SHIRT AND SOME THINGS IN HIS POCKETS. THEN SHE CAME TO THE DOOR AND THREW A LOT OF HIS THINGS OUT AFTER HIM. HE GATHERED THEM UP IN HIS ARMS AND LEFT. IMAGINE!

ELLA CINDERS

The Girl Friend Again



The police were holding Ella until they found Olga Smirkavitch —and now they've found her—
DO YOU KNOW THIS WOMAN?
OLGA!
ELLA!
PLEASE, EXCELLENCY, RELEASE THIS POOR GIRL— IT IS ALL MY FAULT FOR HER TROUBLE! SHE CHANGED CLOTHES AND NAMES WITH ME TO CHANGE MY LUCK—I WAS ONE NIHILIST IN RUSSIA, BUT I WANTED TO CHUCK THEM!
WELL, IT SEEMS TO ME YOUR PASSPORT WAS OKAY, AND SHE DIDN'T NEED ONE— SO I GUESS YOU'RE BOTH IN THE CLEAR, ENOUGH TO CLEAR OUT! GOODBYE AND GOOD LUCK!
I FORGIVE YOU FOR EVERYTHING, OLGA— JUST LET'S SWAP CLOTHES, IDENTITIES, AND FAREWELLS!
ELLA IS ELLA AGAIN! Now for the long, long trail again in quest of the radium map!

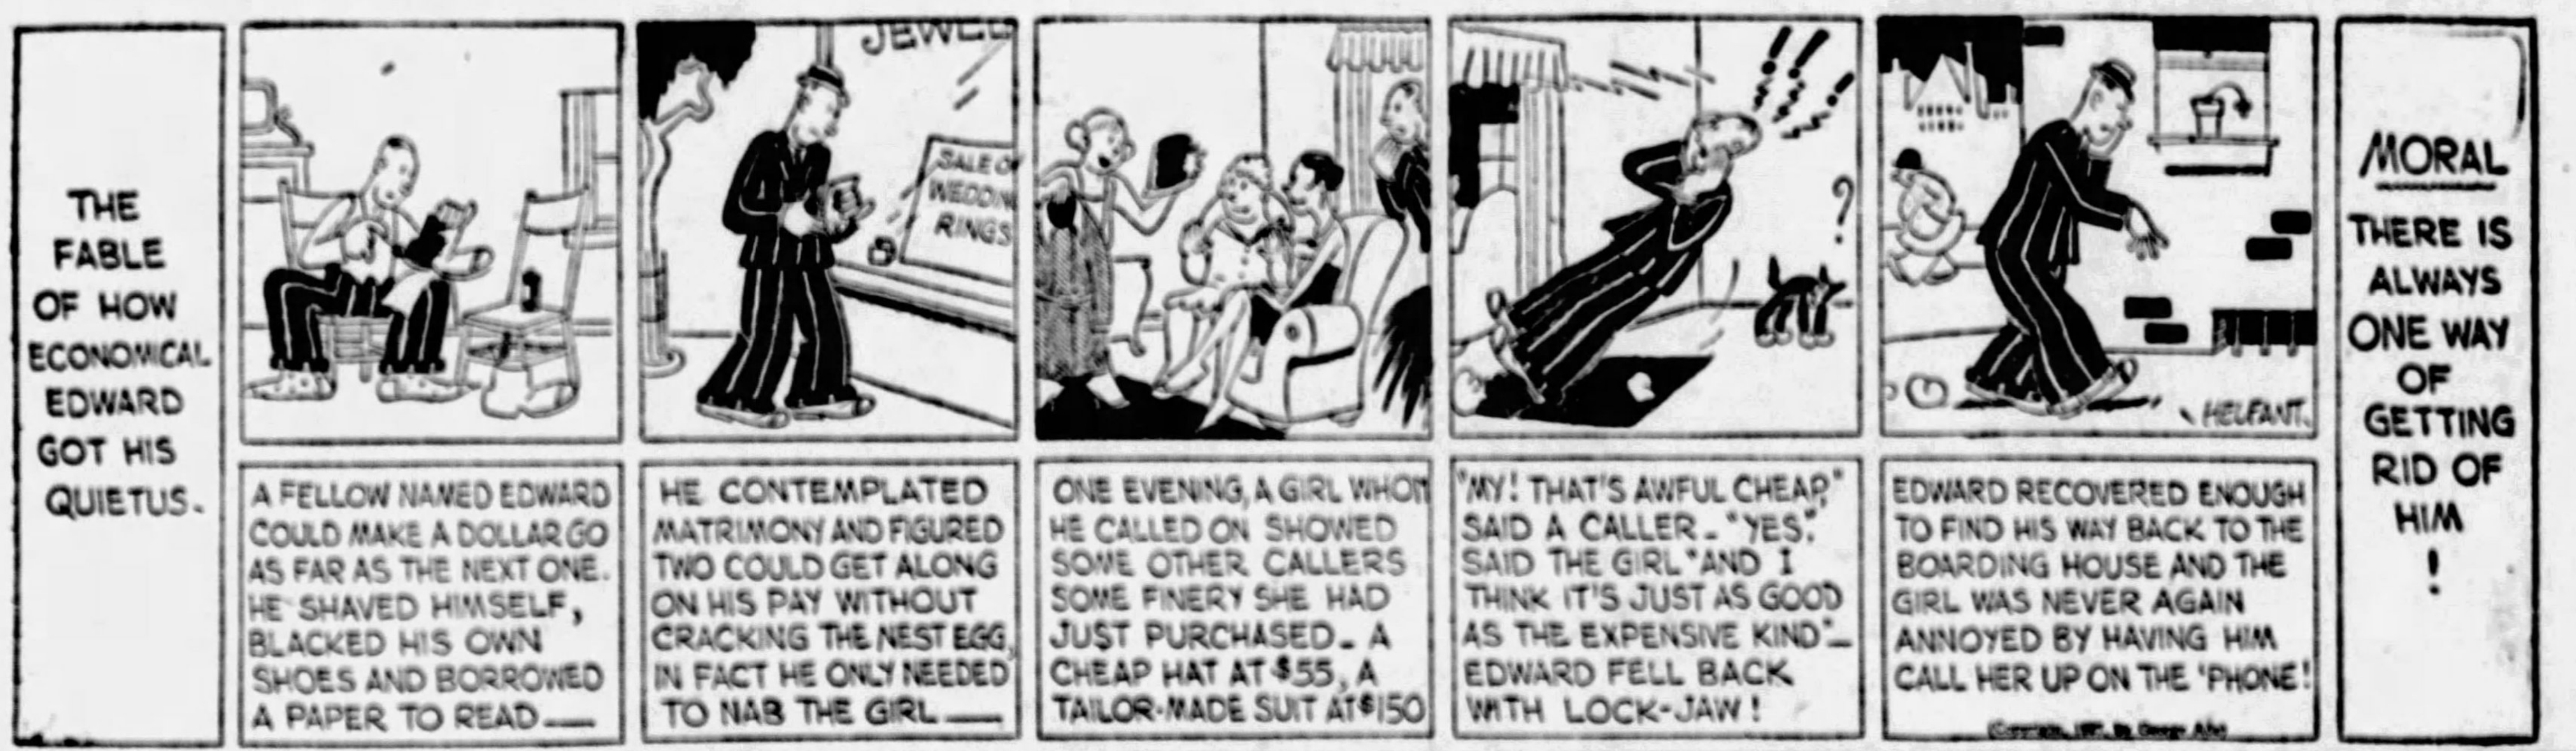
FABLES IN SLANG

By George Ade



THE FABLE OF HOW ECONOMICAL EDWARD GOT HIS QUIETUS.
JEWEL
SALE OF WEDDING RINGS
A FELLOW NAMED EDWARD COULD MAKE A DOLLAR GO AS FAR AS THE NEXT ONE. HE SHAVED HIMSELF, BLACKED HIS OWN SHOES AND BORROWED A PAPER TO READ—
HE CONTEMPLATED MATRIMONY AND FIGURED TWO COULD GET ALONG ON HIS PAY WITHOUT CRACKING THE NEST EGG, IN FACT HE ONLY NEEDED TO NAB THE GIRL—
ONE EVENING, A GIRL WHOM HE CALLED ON SHOWED SOME OTHER CALLERS SOME FINERY SHE HAD JUST PURCHASED — A CHEAP HAT AT $55, A TAILOR-MADE SUIT AT $150
"MY! THAT'S AWFUL CHEAP," SAID A CALLER — "YES," SAID THE GIRL "AND I THINK IT'S JUST AS GOOD AS THE EXPENSIVE KIND" — EDWARD FELL BACK WITH LOCK-JAW!
EDWARD RECOVERED ENOUGH TO FIND HIS WAY BACK TO THE BOARDING HOUSE AND THE GIRL WAS NEVER AGAIN ANNOYED BY HAVING HIM CALL HER UP ON THE 'PHONE!

BUGS BAER Says

SENATOR CURTIS, of Kansas, starts the stampede of favorite sons toward the freshly painted White House.

He has skimmed his hat into the ring alongside of the derbies of Smith, Hoover and others too important to mention.

The senator is a Kansan by birth and a Republican by adoption.

He served eight terms in the House of Representatives, but retired from active life to enter the Senate.

ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER.

Curtis has been in Washington since 1792. And must be reckoned as a conservative, cautious candidate.

What other diplomatic turtle would defer his presidential sprint for 35 years while waiting for the roof of the White House to be repaired?

Now that the pale bungalow is weatherproof there is nothing to prevent a favorite son from enjoying his rheumatism in ease and comfort.

Senator Curtis has plenty of competition for there are 47 other states with 47 favorite sons all eager to enter the hat-tossing Olympics.

Curtis is from the corn and wheat belt and not only knows what the farmer wants but also is adept in avoiding it. The only unfortunate feature about being a favorite son is that the publicity is co-operative.

A favorite son always is kodaked in group pictures with thirty or forty other fortunate pet boys. He is in the same position as a Ford agent trying to find himself in a panorama photograph.

However, every so seldom, one of them rises from the obscurity of mass production and becomes famous as the man who runs the Republican convention right up until the time arrives to nominate the candidate.

After that he becomes chairman of the aisle parades, is made a corporation counsel on the flag waving committee and the senior member of the three-cheers bloc.

From that time on, his political career depends on his ability to holler hooray without notice.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By MARCELINE d'ALROY

ON THE EVERLASTING DEMAND

SOME girls say they have SEEN so MUCH of MEN that They are AFRAID to MARRY. Well, REALLY!
They DESERVE to be
SINGLE; probably no MAN
Will ever think as MUCH of Them as THEY think of THEMSELVES.
The trouble with MOST people
Is that they ASK too much of
EACH OTHER. A WOMAN
Puts her arms around her
FIANCE'S NECK and,
Figuratively, says: "I LOVE
You. Now make me
HAPPY." She then takes
Her ARMS away; but Leaves this CHAIN of all
Her future WELFARE
Hanging round HIS Shoulders.
And MEN are as bad. THEY Say: "I love you. Now
STOP doing this and that."
Always RESTRICTIONS,
Barriers BUILT around the LOVED one, of course, ALL
For LOVE. MEN and WOMEN should NOT
Invest All their HAPPINESS
In ONE other PERSON.
WHY should we SUPPOSE
That ANOTHER will be able To do for US what WE have FAILED to do for OURSELVES?

Part Government Ships Play in Foreign Trade

John E. Edgerton, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, bitterly attacked the Shipping Board and the government's Merchant Fleet Corporation in addressing the meeting of his organization in Chattanooga last week. He asked: "Shall an aroused citizenship rise up in the majesty of a calmly conscious right and say to the government:

" 'Get out of our business for which you were not intended and for which you are not qualified either by experience or natural ability and go back to where you belong and stay there.' "

We do not believe Mr. Edgerton represents the opinion of intelligent American manufacturers. They know what a severe blow it would be to their foreign trade if the government's ships were suddenly to cease operation as Mr. Edgerton demands.

Now, what are the facts about this business? The truth is that since 1920 the government has sold 1,135 ships out of a total of 1,936 which it had on its hands at the close of the war. It has offered to sell the others to private American operators for a song, if only private operators will agree to run the ships on the routes necessary to maintain our foreign business. The government disposes of ships and routes to private operators just as fast as they can be disposed of on the above terms.

Because no private operators can be found, the government's Merchant Fleet Corporation itself has had to use 287 of its ships in active operation, maintaining fifty services to all markets of the world. These ships, exposed to every kind of unfair and ruthless competition from government-supported ships of other nations, have not made money. But their loss is not large compared with the service they have accomplished.

In the year ending June 30, 1927, the government merchant ships had a net loss from vessel operations of $12,774,000 from 1,424 voyages. During the twelve months they carried 11,245,000 tons of cargo.

It is because they completed our list of ocean services that we had in these twelve months the stupendous export trade of $4,968,000,000, and a total foreign trade of over $9,000,000,000. On these vessels were carried a large percentage of our cotton exports that totaled $867,000,000, our wheat, $546,000,000, our petroleum products $537,000,000, our machinery $408,000,000, our automobiles and parts $360,000,000, just to give a few examples.

Mr. Edgerton, who lives in Tennessee, may think that it is nothing to him or his business to keep the flag flying and keep our foreign trade moving under continuation of the transportation services that have given us practical domination over the markets of the world.

Most inland manufacturers have a wider view than Mr. Edgerton, and a keener insight into the meaning of foreign trade and the significance of an American merchant marine, both to carry our exports and to be ready to serve in our national defense. They will not join Mr. Edgerton in being panic-stricken at the government expending $12,774,000 last year to keep this merchant marine in existence.

Notable Public Service By a Hearst Newspaper

It has been a long time since a newspaper performed a public service equal to that of William Randolph Hearst's Washington Herald, in exposing the attempt at jury-fixing in the Sinclair-Fall trial on criminal charges in Washington.

Friday midnight Donald K. King, a reporter on the Washington Herald, received an anonymous telephone message that one of the Sinclair-Fall jurors was talking loosely of what the trial was going to mean for him financially.

Mr. King persuaded the timid telephoner to give his name. Next morning Mr. King sought out his informant and persuaded him to arrange a meeting with the juror. Again the juror talked freely. King and his informant made affidavits on these matters to the Federal attorney.

Judge Siddons declared a mistrial and discharged the jury when he had received these affidavits and heard the result of a raid made Monday by the government upon the hotel rooms of a detective agency, found to be operating upon the entire jury.

As a result, the Federal grand jury is now considering indictments on the extremely grave charge of jury-fixing, grave for the fixer and the fixed alike. A terrible miscarriage of justice has been defeated, for a single fixed juror would have meant acquittal, no matter how firmly guilt was proved.

The Washington Herald is to be congratulated not only for having a reporter who combines the qualities of newspaper man and detective. It is also to be congratulated for having a reputation in its community such that it was the agency to which an outraged citizen turned when he sought the means to prevent a crime against the government, the courts, and the cause of justice.

The Hearst newspapers are jealous of their standing, in the popular mind, as defenders of the rights of the people against the encroachments of predatory wealth.

The Hearst newspapers are justifiably proud that one of their members has again demonstrated, in this sensational manner, the principle upon which they are built and run.

Have Less Heat, More Air

A recent study shows that American women employed in office work are prone to colds and more susceptible than women in general to tuberculosis.

The inquiry attributes this fact to poor ventilation. Offices, as a rule, are overheated in cold weather and lacking in fresh air.

Americans who visit European cities in winter for the first time are impressed by the chilliness of hotel rooms. We are used to indoor temperatures above 70 degrees. Over there the average temperature is between 60 and 65 degrees.

With this coolness goes in many places a greater circulation of air than is customary here. Even London, with its fogs, uses less artificial heat than New York. It also has less tuberculosis.

Bodily resistance to cold is best built up by exercise and fresh air. When the exercise is not to be had indoors during working hours, it should be had outdoors before or after working hours—or before AND after.

As we come to the time when the contrast between indoor and outdoor temperatures will be sharp, it is well to remember this simple truth. It may save many a doctor's bill.

We Get About

Twenty-one million motor vehicles were registered in the United States during the first six months of this year. That means much—

National wealth, widely distributed; transportation, quick and easy; travel, simple and comfortable; pleasure, cheap and wholesome.

This is the gasoline age. The effect already on every phase of our lives is beyond calculation. Guess what it may be in the next twenty years, if you dare!

New York Day by Day
by
O.O.McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—This is a tragedy of ego—a story of a girl lifted out of utter obscurity by the movie razzle dazzle to the heights and left snagged there. From almost kitchen drudgery she ascended to her own magnificent castle and all its trappings. And for a time held first place.

Crowds stood in line all over America to watch her flicker on the silver sheet. She was courted by shop girls as well as the social elect and the result was as usual. Her A became extremely broad and she looked on ordinary folk as hoi-polloi.

Her mere presence in a box at a Broadway theater would stop the show until she took a bow. And one morning when she visited a Fifth avenue department store the police reserves had to be called to cut a path for her to the waiting limousine.

And by degrees her cranial inflation became more pronounced. Even to those who aided her up she became insufferable. Such signs as this appeared on the location where she was being directed: "Members of this company are not permitted to speak to the star."

Then came the crowning financial offer of her career. It was a three-year graduating offer running in five figures weekly and rising higher yearly. It was said to be top salary up to that time in a world of enormous salaries, and with lofty disdain she spurned it.

She decided to produce on her own, having been promised a certain amount by backers for each picture. The first picture was half finished when the stipulated amount of the backers was exhausted. They refused more cash. Her emissary was sent to a New York bank. It was not a bankable proposition.

The star had lived extravagantly and had slight assets. The company that made her such a huge offer found another satisfying box-office star to replace her and was not interested. It is the old, old story of America glancing at the clay feet of a departing idol for the new.

West End avenue, a residential thoroughfare, is called the servant girls' Lovers Lane. Almost any evening will be found house maids, governesses and cooks in the delivery entrance ways, cuddling up to their boy friends. They have no other spooning place. Somehow New York families do not provide a place for servants to entertain. And that may be largely responsible for what is known as "the servant problem."

Incidentally, West End avenue strikes one as a street where people enjoy fine things without show. The private homes are beautiful without ostentation. The residents enjoy music and not jazz noise. They are folk who in a city widely heralded as a show-off town seem to know the rare charm and worth of simplicity.

A society bachelor hard pressed for an original idea at a dinner party hit upon going down into the Tennessee mountains, where he was born, and digging up one of those back-in-the-hollow cornstalk violinists. He was a one-gallused old fellow with gray hair to his shoulders who had seldom worn a pair of shoes. He was induced to appear just as he had appeared at log cabin parties and barn dances. He sang such tunes as "Hand Me Down My Walking Cane," "I Wish I Was a Single Girl Again," "My Horses Ain't Hungry," and "The Butcher's Boy." His simplicity and the plaintive songs considered so hot in the 60's made the most distinctive hit of the social season. Which goes to prove jazz isn't everything.

On the other hand—save for Chic Sale—few Rube comedians become popular in New York. This has been explained as due to the large foreign born population which forms the larger bulk of theatrical patronage. They do not "get" the hayseed patter and costume.

New York likes to laugh at Rubes on the street, but not in the theater.

Garrett P Serviss Says:

Beating Sunlight

THE U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey has found that an ordinary auto headlight, furnished with a specially constructed bulb with a contracted filament, is a more efficient instrument than the classic heliograph for long distance light signaling. The electric current for the light is supplied by dry cells such as are used for doorbells.

With this simple apparatus signals have been seen by the unaided eye as far away as one hundred and fifty miles. In the mountains, where so much of this survey work is done, the atmosphere is frequently of crystal clearness, and then such lights a hundred miles or more distant shine like fallen stars alighted on a peak.

In California the survey has a sight-line 192 miles in length, from Mt. Shasta to Mt. Helena, each mountain being surmounted by a basal surveying station. This particular line has been employed in connecting up the surveys of the Atlantic and Pacific sides of the United States.

Young men of scientific ability who wish to find some occupation that is at once highly useful to mankind and highly romantic and adventurous from the personal viewpoint, might do well to try for a place in the geodetic service. I do not suppose that great numbers of such places are open, and I am sure that no one could obtain one who did not present excellent credentials as to education and character, but it seems to me that the mailclad knights of King Arthur's chivalrous days were less to be envied than these modern knights errant of science, furnished with knowledge that would have seemed necromancy to the old king of the "Round Table," and armed with instruments that would have killed Merlin the Enchanter with spite.

The surveyors are brought into the most intimate relations with all the intricate wonders and beauties of the Rocky Mountains, the Sierras, the coast ranges, as well as those of the Appalachian region; they have daily the pleasures and adventures of the mountain climber, the prospector and the hunter, and all those experiences of wild life and unknown nature that give endless charm to the narratives of explorers and discoverers of new regions. Their signal lights flashed from peak to peak a hundred miles apart, their breathless scrambles among tangled mountains, their campfires glowing amidst the lofty columns, and reflected from the roofing branches of primeval forest trees, their unexpected discoveries of hidden secrets and new aspects of nature, the sense of independence and mental freedom which comes from the original character of their work—all these things should serve to keep them from ennui and make the earth seem to them an abode of perpetual novelty and undying interest.

Achievement

OH, it is hard, the lengthy road whereby man comes to fame, and weighty is the daily load life adds to earth's acclaim. However much a man may dream of heights he would attain, he finds at last the glow, the gleam are all too hard to gain. And few there be who climb alone, but few who ever rise by efforts that are all their own to lofty destinies. For love with patience ever clings about the upward way; and prayers of love, on ardent wings, lift souls above dismay. The man who wins to fame at last and, wreathed with victory, turns his thoughtful gaze upon the past, one happy truth discerns; that not alone he won the crown, but that his every move toward heights of splendor and renown was dreamed, planned, wrought by love.

Tales that are Told

Knew His Mayors

AN AMERICAN visitor had an engagement to play golf with a friend who did not put in a punctual appearance.

The American, who was waiting on the first tee, decided to go to the clubhouse and telephone to his partner, and, not wishing to take his heavy kit with him, said to a bystander, "Excuse me, but would you look after these clubs until I come back?"

"Sir," rejoined the bystander, with ruffled dignity, "I'd have you know I'm Mayor of this town."

"Never mind," replied the American, "I'll chance that." —London Tit-Bits.

Safety First

A SCOTSMAN was taking a walk in the London district, and wondering at the same time how he could make a little easy money, when suddenly he noticed a man leaning over a gate, and made his way in his direction.

"How do ye do?" he said cordially.

"Verra weel," replied the other.

"Och, a brither Scot! Gie me your hand! And where do ye come frae?"

"The Cowcaddens," answered the stranger.

"Then gie me two hands!" insisted the man from Aberdeen.—London Tit-Bits.

A Poor Field

THE squire, more noted for his knowledge of horseflesh than theology, was not a frequent attendant at the village church, but his wife had prevailed upon him to set a good example to the villagers for once.

Awakening suddenly during the rather tedious sermon, the squire yawned and blinked round the congregation. His eyes eventually perceived the hymn number board.

"Columbus!" he exclaimed in an audible whisper, and in a tone of great disgust. "Only three runners!"

The New Day

IT WAS little Jacky's first journey in a train, and the succession of wonders had reduced him to a state of astonishment.

When the locomotive plunged into a tunnel there came from his corner gasps of surprise. Then the train rushed into the open again, and a small voice was lifted in profound wonder. "Lumme! It's tomorrow."—Kentish Observer.

Giving Up

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

If you hang on and persevere you may not succeed anyhow, but if you give up you are sure to lose.

Albert Payson Terhune listed recently a number of things about failures who hung on and finally succeeded.

He tells of Garibaldi, who had lost everything and was in prison and condemned to death, yet he never lost his grip and lived to be the Savior of Italy.

A middle-aged man peddled cordwood in St. Louis in a shabby, old army overcoat, yet this figure was General Grant, who afterwards was elected President of the United States.

An obscure country farmer wanted to come to America and his king would not let him. That farmer afterwards became ruler of England, Oliver Cromwell.

Patrick Henry could not make good in the grocery business or on his farm, but became one of our most famous orators.

At middle age Stonewall Jackson was an obscure college instructor. He lived to be the idol of the South.

Bulwer Lytton thought he was a failure when young and though he was a hopeless invalid he hung on and was afterwards one of the most famous English writers and a member of the peerage.

Thomas A. Edison, as a hard-up newsboy-candy butcher, was thrown from a train and his fall injured his hearing. He got up and tackled his tasks anew and you know what he became afterwards.

Alexander Graham Bell was not much of a success in his youth, but those who bought his stock when he was peddling it at a cheap rate are now rich.

Robert Louis Stevenson, a consumptive, sat on a bench in a San Francisco park, middle-aged and penniless. He became one of the most famous writers in the world.

Napoleon the Third fled to England, was dead broke and made a bare living in America. Afterwards he became Emperor of the French.

Napoleon Bonaparte was considered a failure when a young man, but by a change of fortune became the foremost man of the earth.

So, if you can't do anything else you can hold on. Nobody knows when the lightning is going to strike or where.

Guard Your Health

ARE you thankful enough for the good health and strength which is yours by nature?

Do you guard your eyes and try not to strain them, so that you may have good eyesight all your life?

Do you realize the inconveniences, to say nothing of the added expense, of having to wear glasses?

Some persons are born with eye trouble, but more often it is brought on by reading in poor light, in cramped position, or it may be due to certain conditions of health.

Preventable physical difficulties are deplorable.

If you have enough intelligence you will learn what you ought to know about your physical makeup and, having acquired that knowledge, you will guard against losing the greatest asset to success, namely, good health.

None is so physically well as to be proof against broken laws of health.

Of course you are a free agent, but don't use that freedom to make a cripple or an invalid of yourself.

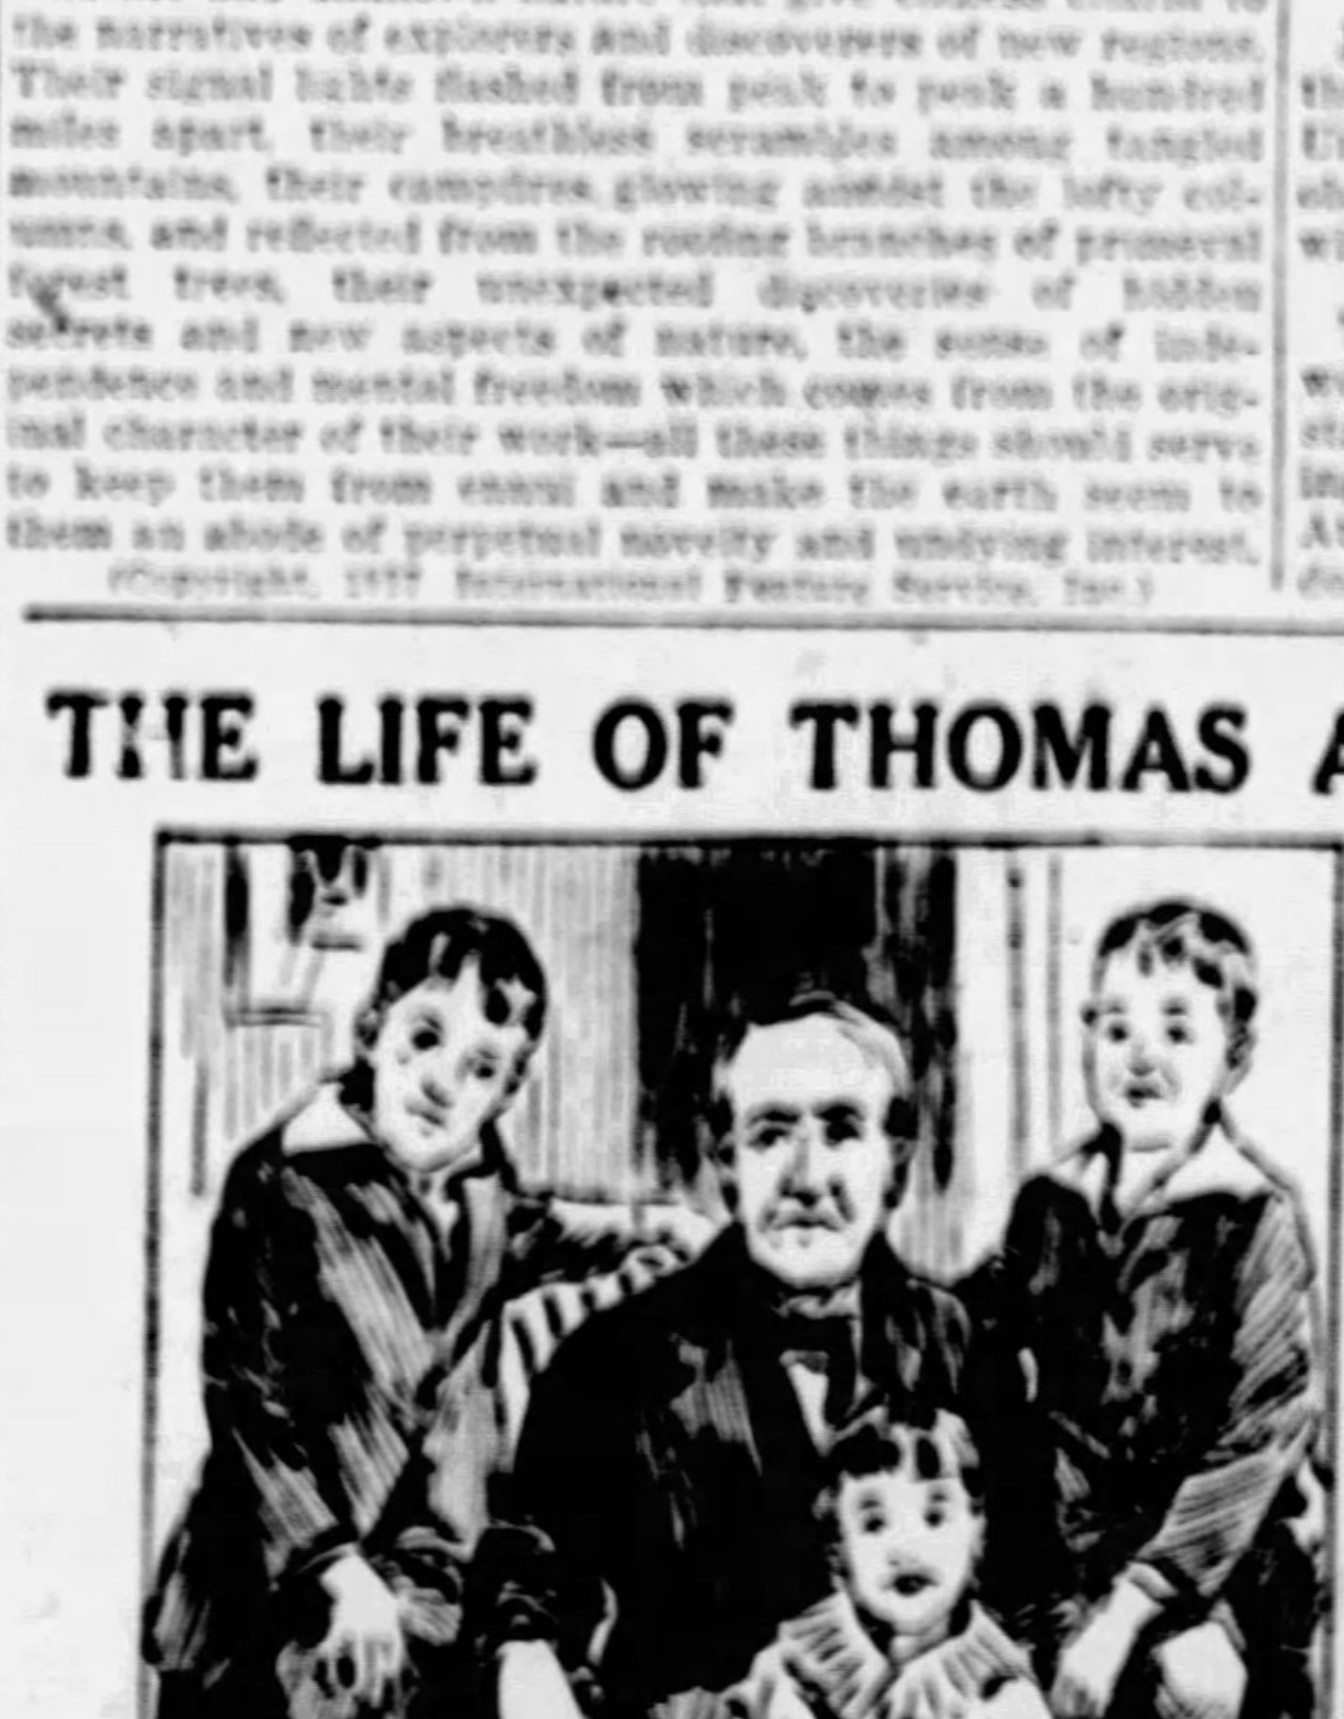
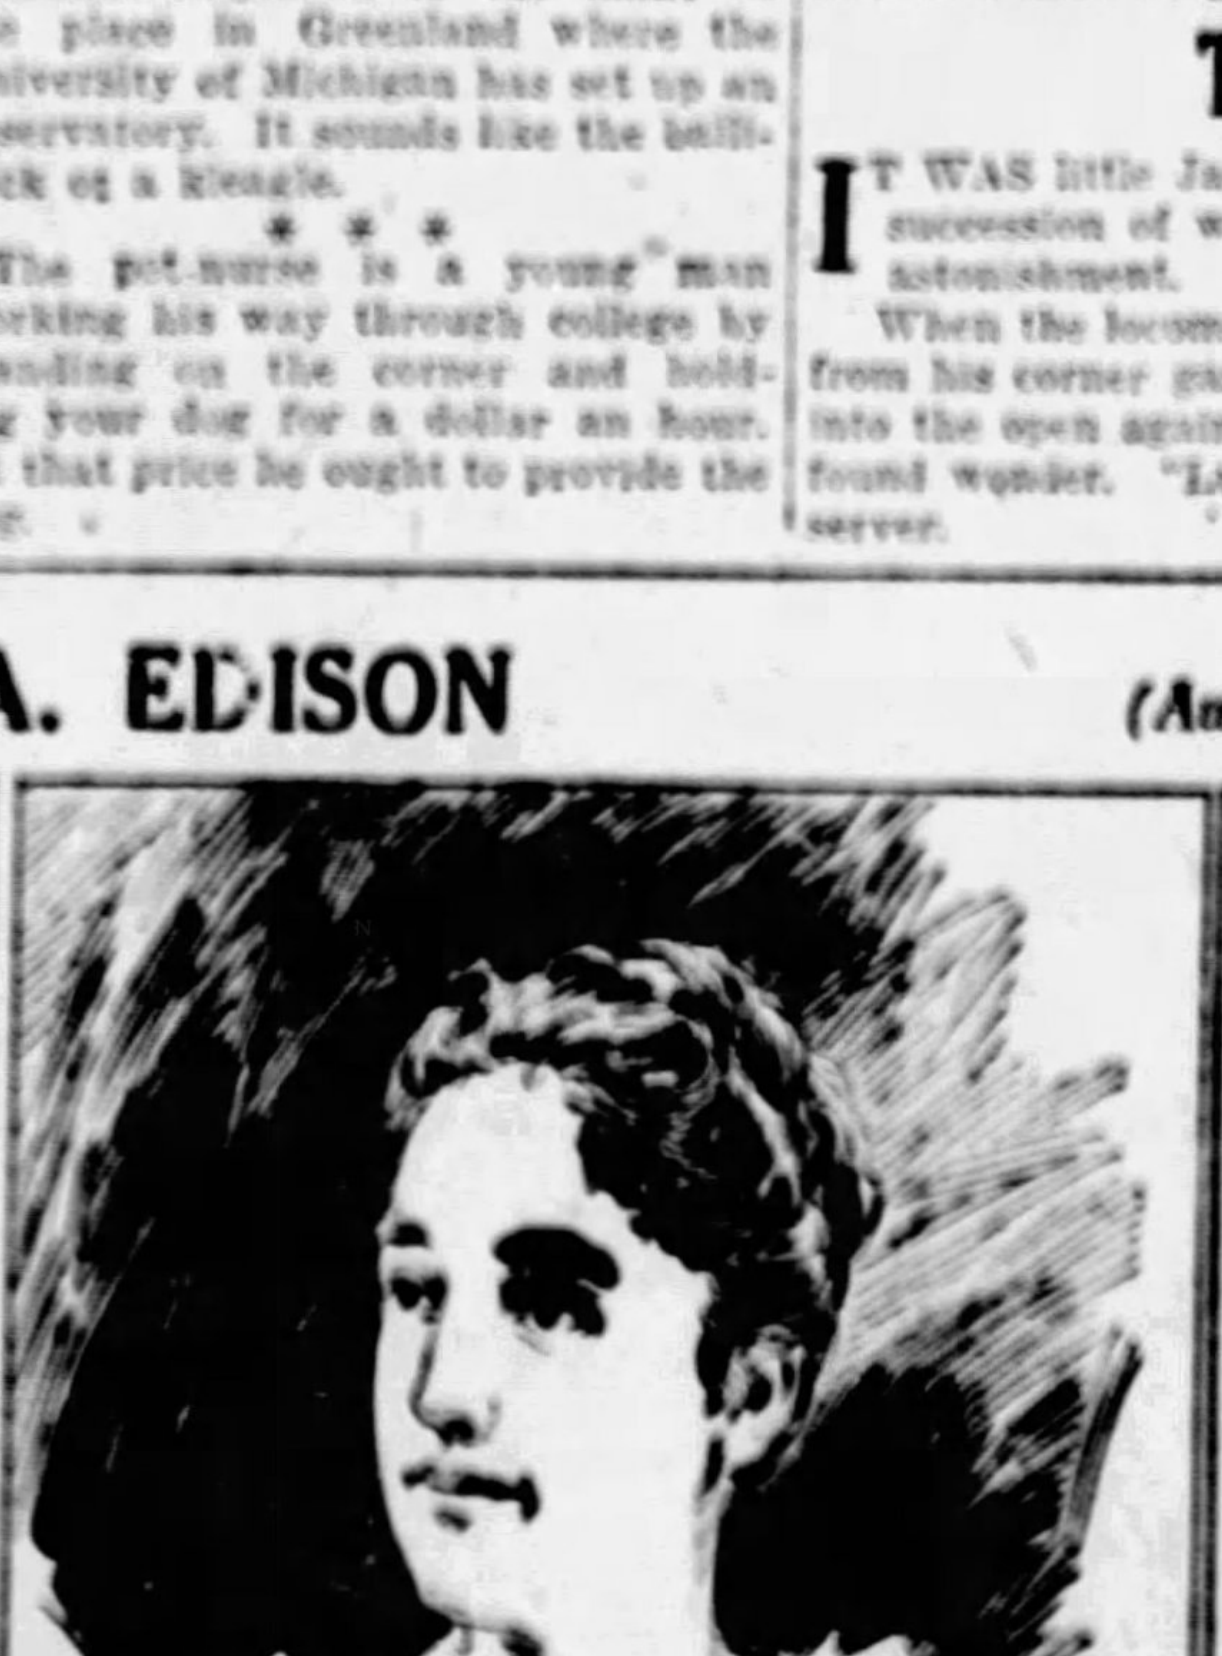
THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

(Authorized and Endorsed by Mr. Edison)

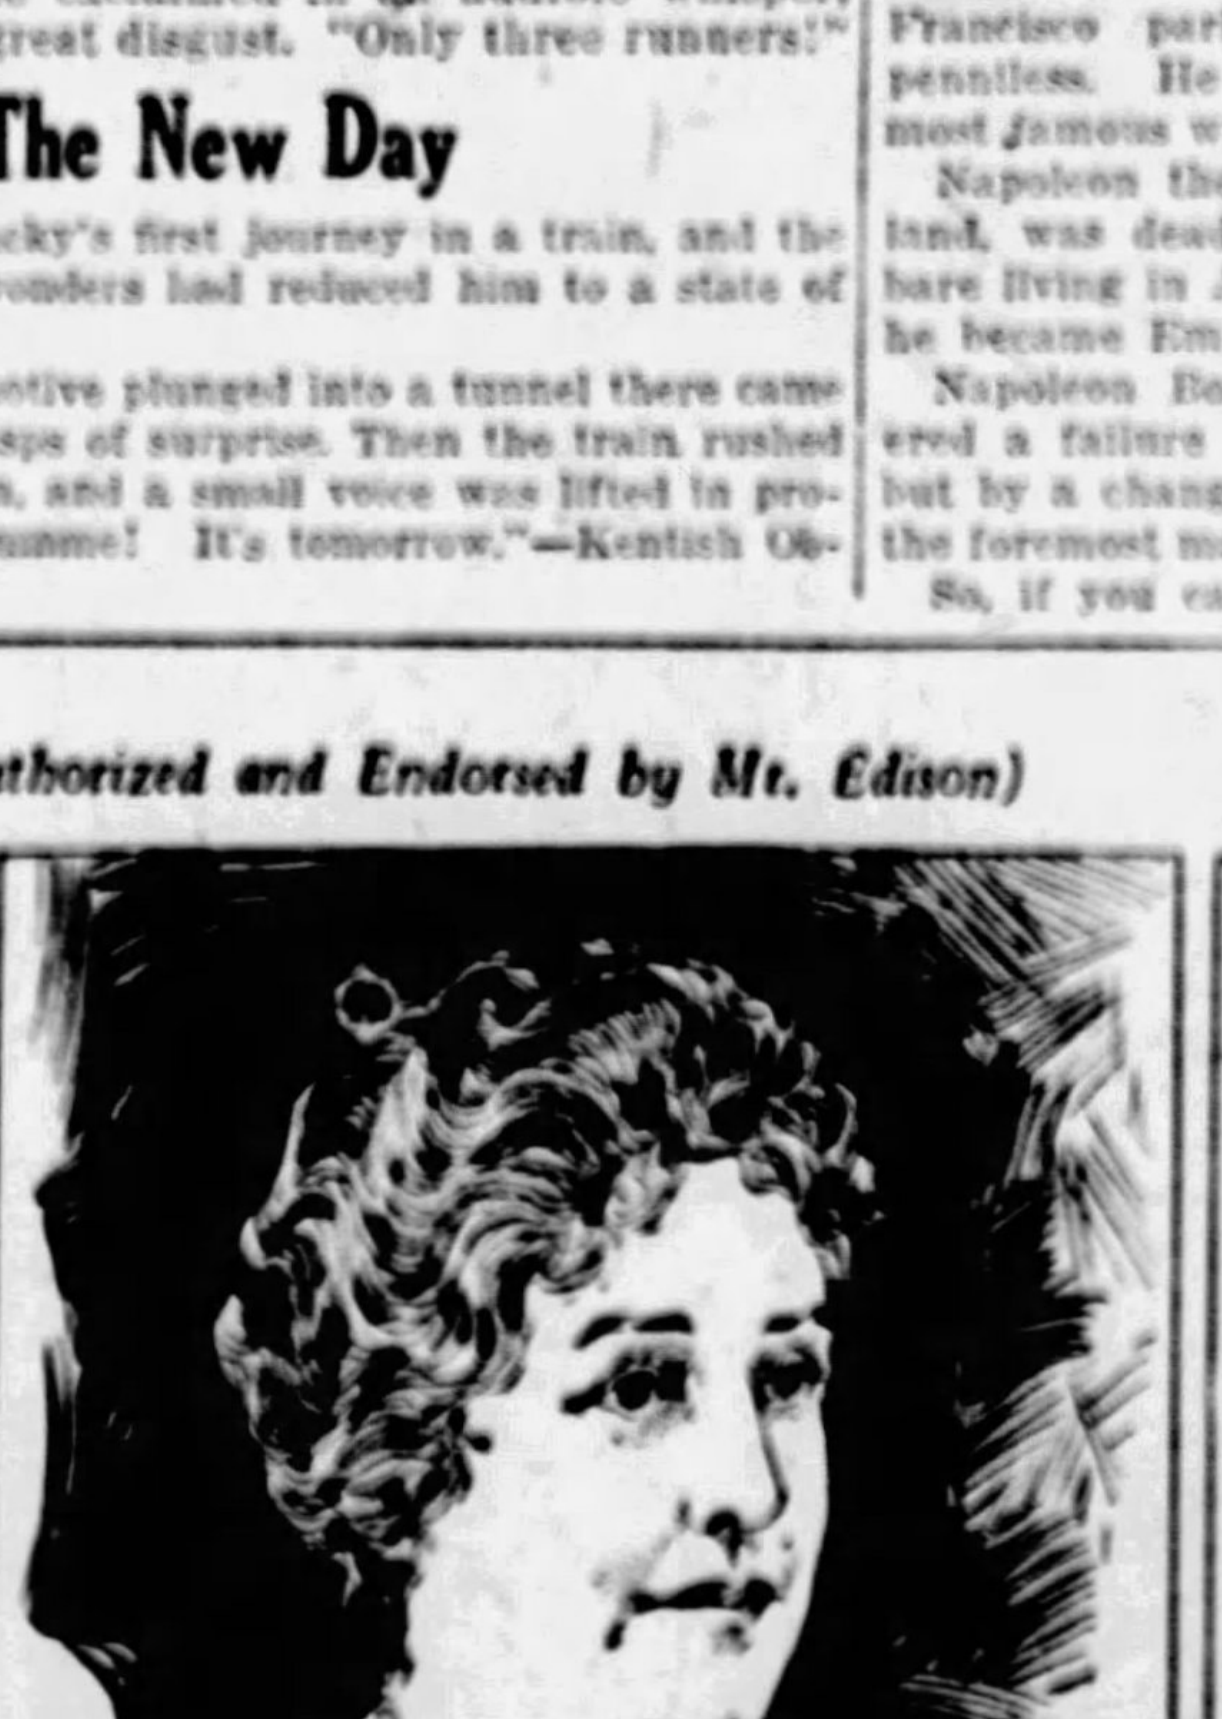
Text by Arthur J. Palmer
Drawings by Frank Kuchenmeister



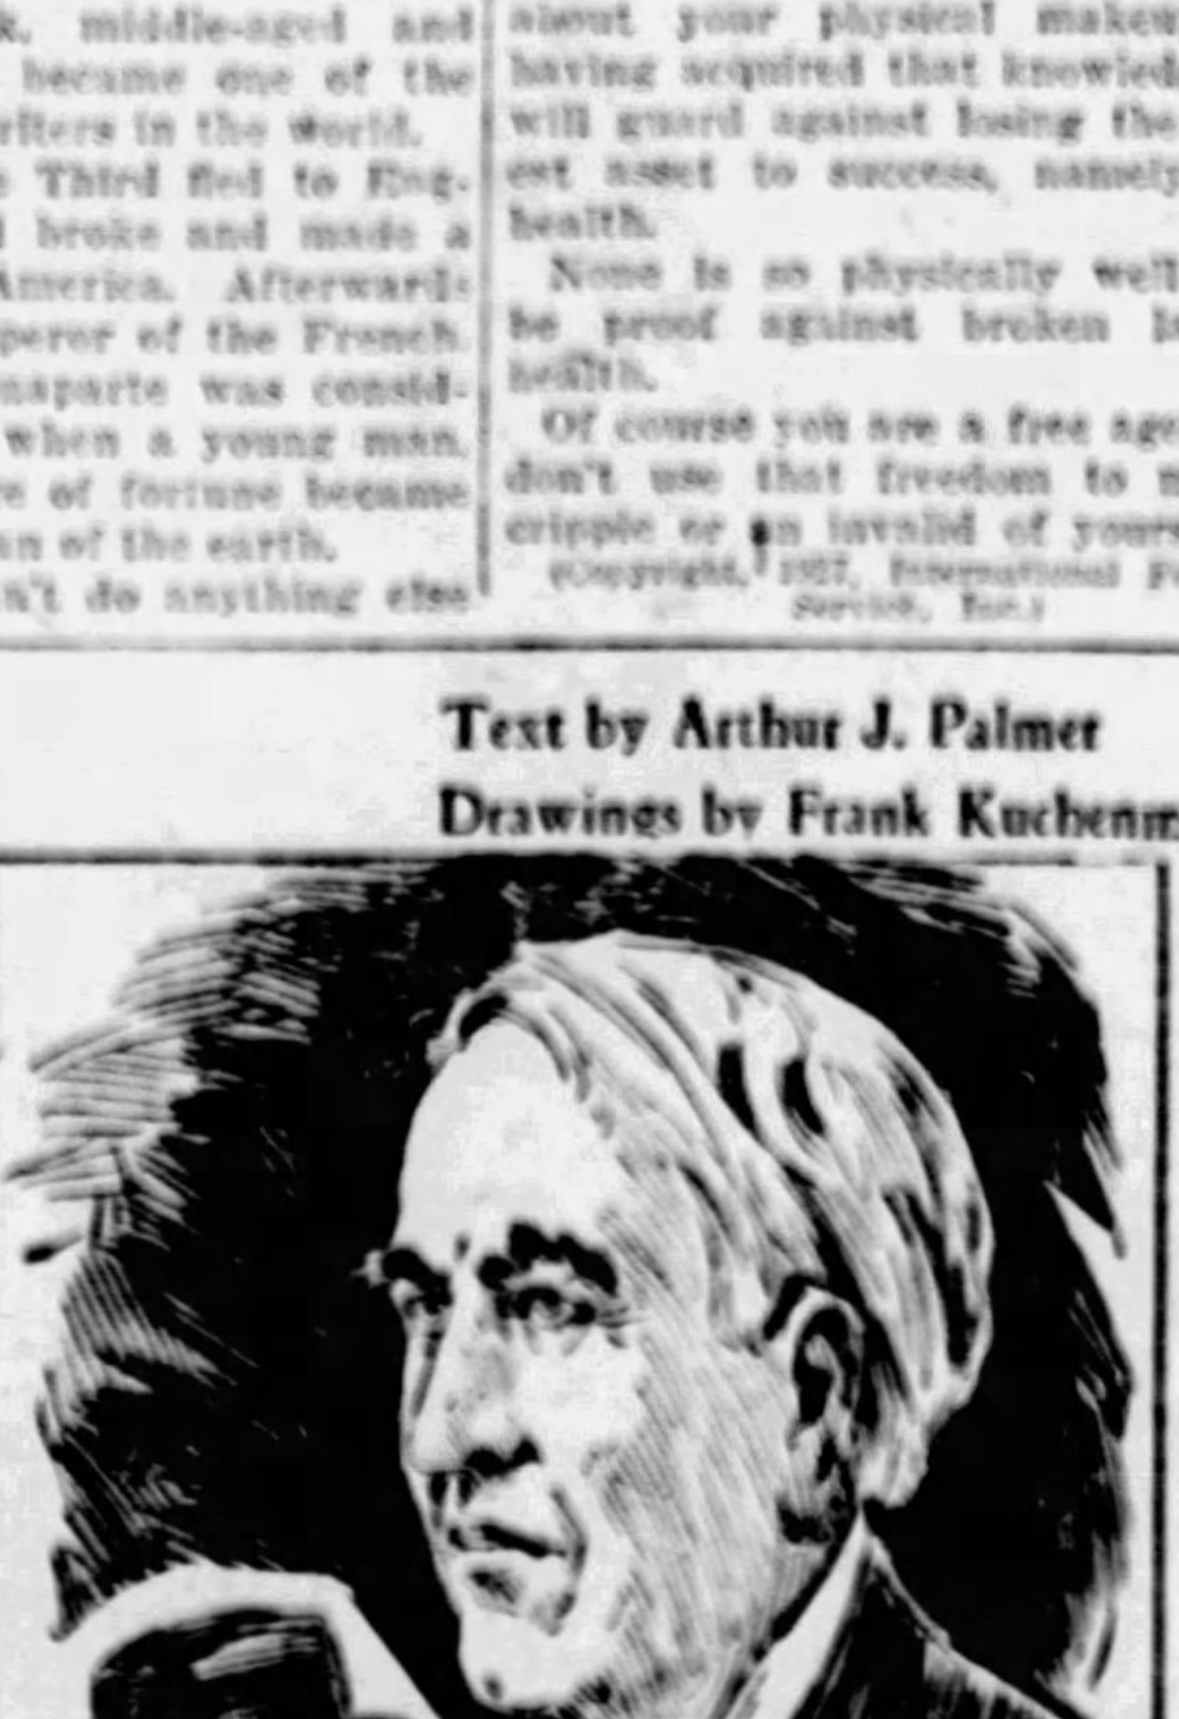
EDISON is very fond of his grandchildren. This charming group shows: John Edison, 5; Peter Edison, 3 and Thomas Edison Sloane, 10, with their distinguished grandfather. The boys are the sons of Mrs. John Eyre Sloane, of South Orange, N. J., the former Miss Madeline Edison.



IN 1886 Edison married Miss Mina Miller, daughter of Lewis Miller, a distinguished inventor and manufacturer of agricultural machinery, and father of the "Chautauqua Idea." Mrs. Edison's children are Charles, Madeleine and Theodore. The picture shows Mrs. Edison about the time of her marriage.



MRS. EDISON today, from her favorite photograph. The remarkably handsome helpmate, who has watched over the personal and social welfare of the great inventor with meticulous care. In addition to her home duties, Mrs. Edison is actively interested in many social and philanthropic causes.



EDISON has been photographed thousands of times and painters and sculptors have reproduced his likeness. Of all his portraits, he prefers the painting by Silvette, from which this drawing was made. With its presentation and the accompanying character study we close this "Life of Thomas A. Edison." (THE END.)
